Fayetteville--The Seventh Annual Commencement at Methodist College brought to a close the tenth academic year of the college.

Degrees were awarded to 156 students. Of this number 58 are from the Fayetteville area, 62 are from other parts of North Carolina and 37 are from out-of-state. Bachelor of Arts degrees were conferred upon 144 and Bachelor of Science on 12 students.

Miss Diane Qualliotine of Fayetteville, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Raoul Frank Qualliotine, received the L. Stacy Weaver Award. This award is named after the first president of Methodist College and is awarded annually to the "member of the graduating class who exemplifies the highest degree of academic excellence, spiritual development leadership and service."

Dr. John M. Lewis, pastor of First Baptist Church in Raleigh, North Carolina, spoke on "Frontiers of Faith" at the Baccalaureate Service on Sunday. He told the seniors that they would be facing four frontiers - intellectual, social, political and psychological.

In the intellectual frontier it must be decided to what end we will use our power and knowledge. Science can give up the power but not the purpose for which to use it.

In the social frontier man must decide what he is going to do with man. "We must," Dr. Lewis said, "arrive at a sense of community where there is a respect for each other as a person."

MORE

In the political frontier, power is the issue. "Shall we use ballots or bullets?" Dr. Lewis asked. He challenged the graduates to use political power to the blessing of all people.

The search for selfhood is found in the psychological frontier.

Ambassador George V. Allen, who holds the permanent classification of Career Ambassador - the highest rank obtainable by an American diplomat, spoke to the seniors at the graduation exercise on Monday, May 25. Ambassador Allen spoke on "Planning in International Affairs."

Ambassador Allen said that although the United States did not plan to become a policeman for the world the role seems to have evolved upon us.

He cited the Marshall Plan as the single best bit of planning in foreign affairs which America has done.

The glimmer of an international federation in Europe is the brightest light on the international horizon, according to Ambassador Allen. In this federation people would not think of themselves as Italians, Frenchmen and so forth, but as Europeans. And within the next fifteen years Americans will face a proposal for an "Atlantic Community" which will include Western Europe, the United States and Canada.

Methodist Students Receive Degrees

The Seventh Annual Commencement at Methodist College brought to a close the 10th academic year of the college.

Degrees were awarded to 156 students. Of this number 58 are from the Fayetteville area, 62 are from other parts of North Carolina and 37 are from out-of-state. Bachelor of Arts degrees were conferred upon 144 and Bachelor of Science on 12 students.

Diane Qualliotine of Fayetteville, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Raoul Frank Qualliotine, received the L. Stacy Weaver Award. This award is named after the first president of Methodist College and is awarded annually to the "member of the graduating class who exemplifies the highest degree of academic excellence, spiritual development, leadership and service."

Dr. John M. Lewis, pastor of First Baptist Church in Raleigh, North Carolina, spoke on "Frontiers of Faith" at the Baccalaureate Service. He told the seniors that they would be facing four frontiers — intellectual, social, political and psychological.

Ambassador George V. Allen, who holds the permanent classification of Career Ambassador — the highest rank obtainable by an American diplomat, spoke to the seniors at the graduation exercise. He spoke on "Planning in International Affairs."

Allen said that although the United States did not plan to become a policeman for the world the role seems to have evolved upon us.

He cited the Marshall Plan as the single best bit of planning in foreign affairs which America has done.

The glimmer of an international federation in Europe is the brightest light on the international horizon, according to Ambassador Allen. In this federation people would not think of themselves as Italians, Frenchmen and so forth, but as Europeans. And within the next fifteen years Americans will face a proposal for an "Atlantic Community" which will include Western Europe, the United States and Canada.
