METHODIST COLLEGE ACCREDITATION CONTINUED

FAYETTEVILLE--The accreditation of Methodist College has been continued, according to an announcement made at an annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools held recently in Atlanta.

The meeting was attended by Methodist College representatives Dr. Samuel J. Womack, Academic Dean, and S. R. Edwards, Registrar.

Methodist College was required to complete a new self-study of all areas of college life, including academic, sports, and administrative policies, in addition to student activities, alumni affairs and personnel concerns.

Methodist College was visited in February, 1970, by a committee from the Southern Association, chaired by Dr. Francis Bonner, Vice President and Dean of Furman University, Greenville, S. C.

The Southern Association approved the local institution's continuation of accreditation as a result of the recent self-study, a follow-up to one made prior to initial accreditation in 1966, and the committee's campus visitation.

VARIETY OF MUSIC HONORS BEETHOVEN

December 16, 1770 is the birth date of composer Ludwig van Beethoven renowned German musical genius.

On Dec. 16, 1970, the Methodist College Wind Ensemble is dedicating a colorful concert to Beethoven, featuring wind, brass, and "fireworks."

The concert is scheduled for 8:00 p.m. in the Reeves Auditorium on campus.

Conductor John W. Rider, instructor of Music at Methodist College, advised that the Wind Ensemble's evening concert will be only one hour long and stressed that casual dress is appropriate.

"Since this year marks the 200th anniversary of Beethoven, our Music Department wanted to do something special -- this feature is our tribute to the composer on his birthday. The Wind Ensemble has worked toward this concert almost all semester," Rider stated. "We've tried to include music for all ages."

Six main works will be played by approximately forty students in the Wednesday concert.

----More

"I'm A Brass Band" from the movie "Sweet Charity" will open the program.

The brass section's specialty is Giovanni Gabrieli's "Sonata pian'e forte" for organ and brass choir. Organist Don Snellgrove, a senior music major at Methodist College, will add antiphony.

Rock fans will enjoy Jesse James's "The Horse," an arrangement with guitar, bass, and band harmonies. Robert Williams, a Fayetteville musician who plays with his own trio, will be spotlighted as solo guitarist.

An additional light number and selections from "Bye Bye Birdie" are included on the program.

No finer finale could conclude the concert than Handel's suite from the music for "The Royal Fireworks," especially for wind instruments.

Colleagues Rider and Rowland Matteson, assistant professor of Chemistry at Methodist and talented amateur musician, will join students in "The Royal Fireworks." Rider will play the clarinet; Matteson will be guest conductor.

Philip Crutchfield, assistant professor of Chemistry, also will join students in the concert to play the tuba.

Wind Ensemble students at Methodist College earn one semester hour toward graduation. "Most members take the course just for fun...we have about four music majors in the class," Rider commented.

"We call ourselves an ensemble, since we're not quite large enough to be a band," Rider explained.

A few members of the Ensemble earn money playing out of state and in the Fayetteville area. An exchange agreement with the Fayetteville State University Band provides Methodist College Ensemble musicians when they are needed for concerts given by the University.

"I enjoy playing on occasion with the F.S.U. Band," commented Rider, who actively participated in concerts while working on his B. M. degree at the University of Idaho and his M.M. at the University of Illinois.

An avant garde music enthusiast, Rider's favorite group is "Blood, Sweat, and Tears."

In addition to the clarinet, Rider plays the saxophone, flute, oboe and bassoon. He teaches music appreciation and music theory and instructs individuals in wind and percussion classes.

In his free time, Rider composes orchestral pieces, reads, plays golf and works toward earning his doctorate from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

A native of Idaho Falls, Idaho, Rider brought his family to Fayetteville from Champaign, Ill. His wife Carol shares her husband's musical interests. She directs the youth choir at Eutaw Heights Baptist Church where she teaches kindergarten. Johnny, Julie and Jaqueline are their little Riders.

Now in his second year at Methodist College, Rider expressed concern that public audiences at concerts are not larger.

"Students work so hard toward preparing programs. We hope to have a sizeable audience at the concert," he said.

Perhaps Handel - to - rock variety on Beethoven's birthday is just what the Fayetteville area wants to begin the holidays.

FAYETTEVILLE'S METHODIST COLLEGE EARNS CONTINUED ACCREDITATION

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C. --- Students at Fayetteville's newest senior college will begin the holiday season with reassurance about their home away from home,

The accreditation of Methodist College has been continued, according to an announcement made at an annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools held recently in Atlanta.

The four-year, liberal arts institution was required to complete a new self-study of all areas of college life, including academic, sports, and administrative policies, in addition to student activities, alumni affairs and personnel concerns.

Methodist College was visited and evaluated in February, 1970, by the Visitation Committee from the Southern Association, chaired by Dr. Francis Bonner, Vice President and Dean of Furman University, Greenville, S. C.

Continuation of accreditation resulted from the campus visitation and the self-study, a follow-up to one made prior to initial accreditation in 1966.

The Atlanta meeting was attended by Methodist College representatives Dr. Samuel J. Womack, Academic Dean, and S. R. Edwards, Registrar.

Methodist College opened to students in 1960. The modern campus is formed by nineteen buildings and structures, including a color-lighted fountain and pool, a chapel with red oak paneling, and a bell tower with a carillon system which has been playing carols recently.

Several main buildings on campus are encased by sun screens created by walls of concrete, octagonal blocks which create a "honeycomb" effect. Use of the screens results in a 45% reduction of heat and glare from the sun.

Located six miles from Fayetteville, county seat of Cumberland County, the campus was constructed on a series of interlocking malls and rolling woodland near the Cape Fear River.

Three air-conditioned residence halls are named for Methodist Bishop Paul N. Garber; Honorable Terry Sanford; and Dr. Lucius Stacy Weaver, first and current president of Methodist College; the fourth is named Cumberland Hall.

Work is now being done on a lake-side amphitheater to be used for future outdoor dramatic and musical performances.

December 18, 1970

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.-----Scrooge would be furious if he knew what 30 Methodist College students undertook last week.

Koinonia, the inter-denominational Christian fellowship group on campus, conducted a successful service project for the Cumberland Sheltered Work Activities School. The sheltered school trains 38 severely retarded adults in ceramics, woodwork and sewing.

From Dec. 9 - 15, Koinonia members and other volunteer students manned a sales-display table in the college student union. A large selection of ceramic, wood and fabric ornaments and hand crafts were sold to members of the Methodist College community. The goods were made at the sheltered school.

Larry Lugar, president of Koinonia and a math major from Wilson, N. C., reported that almost $250 from sales were given to the sheltered school. The amount includes cost and profit. Koinonia donated all proceeds and their time and efforts of the week.

Mrs. Lois Byrd, director of the Fayetteville work activities program, commented that she was delighted that Koinonia wanted to sponser the project, since it had given the 38 adults incentive to create and a goal to achieve. It also acquainted more people with the efforts of those who work at the school.

-----more

Koinonia -- which mean "fellowship" -- was formally organized in 1969 and membership is open to all members of the college community.

Koinonia also conducts Sunday vesper services open to Cumberland County residents in the new J. W. Hensdale Chapel on campus during the academic semester.

Methodist College students will enjoy a two-week holiday until January 4th.

METHODIST COLLEGE STUDENTS HELP SHELTERED ADULTS

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.-----Scrooge would be furious if he knew what 30
Methodist College students undertook last week.

Koinonia, the inter-denominational Christian fellowship group on campus, conducted a successful service project for the Cumberland Sheltered Work Activities School.

From Dec. 9 - 15, Koinonia members and other volunteer students manned a sales-display table in the college student union. A large selection of ceramic, wood and fabric ornaments and hand crafts were sold to members of the Methodist College community. The goods were made at the sheltered school.

"Over $200 from sales will be given to the Cumberland Work Activities School," said Larry Lugar, president of Koinonia and a math major from Wilson, N.C. Lugar's parents are Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Lugar, Knollwood Drive, Wilson.

"The amount taken in includes cost and profit. Koinonia is keeping no profit...we donated our time and efforts for a week," Lugar explained.

The idea to sponser the project originated with one of the group's three faculty advisers, Dr. Garland Knott, chaplain and associate professor of religion at Methodist College.

Dr. Knott and his wife have long been impressed by the work done by the 38 severely retarded adults and their directors at the center on Cool Spring Street.

"The sheltered workshop concept is a grand undertaking," Dr. Knott said. "It's amazing what they accomplish there. Everyone has such a positive attitude and wants to be helpful," he added.

"Students reacted very positively to the project. And there was always a student available and eager to work at the display table," Knott said.

Ceramic ash trays, Christmas tree ornaments, wooden candlesticks, a rocking footstool, place mats, pocketbooks, laundry bags, tobacco pouches and Christmas trees made from rug fabrics are some of the products bought by student and faculty customers.

"We had to go back twice for more merchandise," Lugar commented.

Mrs. Lois Byrd, director of the work activities program, commented, "We were delighted that Koinonia wanted to sponser this project. It gave us an opportunity to sell more merchandise and to acquaint more people with our efforts."

Mrs. Byrd explained that the crafts created by the sheltered school may be used by individuals or groups as a means for fund-raising.

"We hope to have more outlets for our goods in the future." she said.

"As a result of this Methodist College project, our retarded adults in the sewing, ceramic, and woodwork divisions have had a real incentive to create with a purpose. They've had a goal," she added.

An adult in the ceramics division wanted to know if the sheltered school could keep making items for the college to sell.

Lugar said, "I was pleased by student support and response to this project. The project was fitting for the season. We may try it again."

Koinonia --which means "fellowship"-- was formally organized in 1969 and is open to all members of the college community. It meets monthly.

Koinonia also conducts Sunday vesper services open to Fayetteville residents in the J.W. Hensdale Chapel during the academic semester.
