Adoption of New Academic Calendar

A revised academic calendar has been adopted for the 1971-72 school year at Methodist College.

Classes for the fall semester will begin on August 26, approximately two weeks earlier than in past years.

Commencement exercises will conclude on August 26, according to college president L. Stacy Weaver.

The calendar enables students to complete first semester examinations prior to a Christmas vacation.

Spring semester classes begin January 11, with an Easter break beginning at noon on March 24 and ending April 5.

Student Government Association president John Brown said, "We have studied carefully the 'early semester' schedules used in other colleges and universities in the nation. We have developed this new calendar in the best interest of the college community."

The revised calendar was favorably accepted by students, faculty and administrators at Methodist College.

Pembroke's Plans Set

PEMBROKE — A revised academic calendar will become effective at Pembroke State University for the 1971-72 school year, with classes beginning Aug. 26 and commencement set May 14.

This new calendar will permit students to take their fall examinations before the Christmas holidays. Pembroke State University's calendar in the past has scheduled fall semester examinations in mid-January.

Dr. English E. Jones, president of Pembroke, said in making the announcement of the calendar's adoption that "This calendar has been proposed for some time by both students and faculty. In the past, most students have felt that in some instances their final grades for the fall semester were affected by the fact that they were off two weeks prior to taking their final examinations."

The spring semester will begin immediately after the Christmas holidays, Jones said.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.-----Senior art majors at Methodist College are featured artists for April and May on campus. The series begins with a two-woman show.

A show by LaRay Godwin Beale and Angela Vurnakes will be exhibited Monday, Mar. 29 through Friday, April 13. The public may view the exhibit on weekdays from 9:00 a.m. till 5:00 p.m., in the lobby of the Fine Arts Building.

Mrs. Beale's works include approximately 35 abstract oil paintings and realistic drawings, a collection of four years' work. A dean's list student at Methodist College, Mrs. Beale hopes to continue her study of art by working for a masters degree. She is the wife of Capt. Hammond A. Beale who is stationed at Fort Bragg, and she is the daughter of Mrs. Gaynell Godwin of Sumter, S. C.

Works by Miss Vurnakes include approximately 30 oil paintings, drawings and sculptures. Her exhibit represents three years' work in abstract and realistic art.

Miss Vurnakes is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter G. Vurnakes of Fayetteville. A dean's list student at Methodist, she is past editor of SMALL TALK and a member of the Student Government Association High Court.

Feature on Sociology Field Work

Jean Hutchinson, Public Relations Office
488-7110, Ext. 228

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.-----When does a college student join "the establishment"? When he becomes a teacher intern, an assistant in a day care center for the retarded or a court counselor for juvenile offenders.

Sociology 430 is one upper-level course at Methodist College here that provides students realistic off-campus experiences in various careers.

"Trips and Troubles" is a personal log of field experiences recorded by students in the four-hour sociology course, which provides training in one of 17 varied social and rehabilitative agencies in Cumberland County.

Earl D. Martin, assistant professor of sociology, said that in addition to keeping the log, which is a record of four hours of field exposure per week, students must attend a two-hour weekly seminar for instruction, sharing experiences and relating practice to theory.

One "Trips and Troubles" author is John Brown, a Methodist College senior who interns as a court counselor for the Twelfth Judicial District in Cumberland County. Brown is from Piscataway, N. J.

As a counselor, Brown has worked closely with more than fifteen teenage boys from the Fayetteville area -- boys who had problems adjusting to school, home and society situations. In addition, he has counseled young married couples.

Carefully supervised by a professional counselor, Fielding L. Wheeler, Brown has seen and experienced being overloaded with clients and he knows the reality of juvenile dilemmas: family pressures, poverty, drugs, crime and peer influences.

As five boys waited outside to see him, Brown tried to assure one troubled adolescent that he is a concerned counselor, not just a "rookie school boy" or a detective or a judge.

"The mishandling of cases can have a permanent detrimental effect on the child," said student Brown.

"The role a court counselor must play is one of extreme difficulty. He must be knowledgeable in court, keen in investigation, personable with parents or guardians, firm yet understanding with the child, responsible yet 'hip' to modern talk, terms, actions and ideas, and one step ahead of everybody concerned. He must also be able to put the best interest of the child first..." he added.

Like several others in the sociology course, Brown overworks for no pay. He averages counseling eight hours a week, instead of the four required. When he returns to the college campus, he assumes his role as Student Government Association president. After law school, Brown intends to enter a career in urban affairs.

Among the nineteen other Sociology 430 students is Mary Alice Leimone, a senior sociology major from Burgaw, N. C. Miss Leimone chose to do her field work at the Day Care Center for the Retarded. Her supervisors are William S. Bethune, director, and Mrs. Betty B. George, an expert assistant.

Miss Leimone assists a minimum staff of dedicated workers as they train 39 physically and mentally handicapped children. In moderate facilities she helps care for children with "below 50 I.Q.'s," ranging in age from three to teens.

Miss Leimone hopes eventually to work in an orphanage. In her field work, she has watched the weak become strong. A girl with a serious speech impediment learns to say her name. Another child learns to walk, to sit, to hold a crayon. A mongoloid toddler cheerfully dresses himself after a nap, without help.

In a social setup, the retarded reach goals in self-help and socialization. Music, movies, printed words and nature's beauty become a part of their world.

While parents work, the children find a welcome from peers and adults at the Day Care Center, which is, to Miss Leimone, "an 'establishment' where everyone is his brother's keeper."

Two Ph.D.'s Hired for Science Department

Jean Hutchinson, Public Relations Office
488-7110, X228

Announced by Sam J. Womack, Academic Dean

Two new professors have been hired in the science department at Methodist College for the 1971-72 academic year.

Dr. William W. Horner will assume the position of associate professor of chemistry, with his major schedule in chemistry. Dr. Patrick D. Hollis has been employed as assistant professor of biology. He will instruct classes in biology and chemistry. Announcement of the new positions was made by Sam J. Womack, Academic Dean at Methodist College.

Horner holds the B. S., M. A. and Ph. D. degrees in chemistry from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is currently employed at Elon College in the chemistry department.

A native of Portsmouth, O., Horner is the author of a number of scholarly papers which he has presented before regional meetings of the American Chemistry Society.

Announcement of Summer Session

Jean Hutchinson, Public Relations Office
488-7110, Ext. 228

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.-----Summer session classes will begin June 7 at Methodist College.

Forty-four courses will be offered in art, music, economics, education, history, mathematics, philosophy, political science, psychology, religion, and sociology. A scientific study of pollution problems has been scheduled.

French, German and Spanish lab courses and a study of fundamentals of speech will be offered.

The session is offered for students interested in beginning the college program, accelerating regular studies, or removing academic deficiencies, and for the renewal of teaching certificates.

June 4 is the last day of registration for the session which ends July 15.

Dr. Fred C. McDavid is summer school director at Methodist College.
