150 Degrees Awarded

Jean Hutchinson, Public Relations Office
488-7110, Ext. 228

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.-----Fifty-five Fayetteville area residents were among 150 graduates who received degrees at Methodist College at 10:30 Monday morning.

Among 18 honor graduates, nine from Fayetteville received degrees Magna Cum Laude or Cum Laude. Harriet Rollins Flowers of Goldsboro was graduated Summa Cum Laude.

John Wayne Brown, a political science major from Piscataway, N. J., received the L. Stacy Weaver Award. The award honors the first president at Methodist College and is presented annually at commencement to the graduate who has best exemplified leadership, service, spiritual development and academic excellence, and who has made a creative contribution to all areas of college life.

A capacity crowd in Reeves Auditorium heard an address by Dr. Myron F. Wicke, general secretary of the Higher Education Division of the Board of Education of the United Methodist Church.

Bishop Earl G. Hunt, Jr., resident bishop of the Charlotte area who presides over the Western North Carolina United Methodist Conference, spoke to graduates in Sunday's baccalaureate service.

Dr. Wicke told seniors, "Look at the earth and examine it; you will be astonished at what creation is. Take thought of your personal gifts. Do not underestimate them...they are yours...use them for yourself and for other men and women. Follow the messages that you have heard in life." Wicke said, "The test is ahead. May God help you to understand its nature."

Bishop Hunt said in the Sunday service, "Unless individuals can become responsible, institutions will remain irrelevant... Locked up inside of you and me are the resources for healing the nation in this hour." Hunt said the concerns of young people today are essentially religious in nature and that youth now has the potential for bringing about the greatest spiritual reformation of all times.

Black Student From Petersburg Talks About College

Jean Hutchinson, Public Relations Office
488-7110, Ext. 228

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.-----John Dave Conwell, first black athlete at Methodist College in Fayetteville, spoke out recently...about being in the minority on a predominantly white campus.

Conwell was one of 14 blacks in a student body of 781. About his white colleagues he said, "They treat me like an individual and a friend... I feel accepted." But he admits, "We need more black girls here.... I've had to make my own social life." Conwell said he has made many friends at nearby, predominantly-black Fayetteville State University.

Conwell's parents are U.S. Army Staff Sgt. and Mrs. Charles S. Faison of Petersburg, Va. He was graduated from Fayetteville Senior High in 1968, where he established a reputation as "top rebounder" in basketball. A junior at Methodist, Conwell and Bobby Hodges, a (white) senior from Florence, S. C., were named to the all-conference team in basketball in the regional Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference this year. In Conwell's highest game for the season, he netted 27 points.

Conwell's first dream is to play pro-basketball. As a realist, though, he's paving a path to veterinary medicine. "I love science," he admitted. His microscope-mania and flora-and-fauna fervor probably resulted from the influence of his brother-in-law, James Boone, who teaches biology and coaches at Cardoza High School in Washington, D. C. Conwell shared in Boone's enthusiasm as he studied for a masters degree in biology.

Conwell is majoring in biology and minoring in chemistry.

Besides being president of the monarch club -- a club for athletes who letter in any sport -- Conwell was a member of the Methodist College science club this past year. His reports on the challenges of being a science major indicated some requirements for vertebrate taxonomy.

"Big John" told how he bagged "akistrodon concortris" (a live copperhead snake) at 2:00 a.m. recently in the nearby "Methodist woods." Not just for fun, mind you. He had to have a collection of 13 snakes -- all properly preserved and tagged with nomenclatures in Latin -- in his zoology collection of 80 vertebrate animals.

Idleness is not a Conwell characteristic. Among his many interests are collecting pennies and stamps, model airplanes, sketching and drawing, swimming and skin-diving, and auto mechanics and drag-racing. He ran for vice president of his dormitory recently, but lost by a few votes. (He was one of seven blacks living on campus last year.

If Conwell couldn't be found in the science lab or on the basketball court during the past semester, he was probably at the YMCA. He worked there part-time, coaching and supervising underprivileged school children as they participated in various sports. He said, "I enjoyed having a chance to change the kids...to show them constructive things to do instead of destructive things." He's working at "the Y" on weekends this summer.

Does the rising senior regret going to a predominantly white college? Hardly. The ratio is changing. He said, "This is a small school where everyone knows what's going on.... People communicate here."

And, as an individual, Conwell has made a name for himself at Methodist College.

Piscataway Student Wins Award

Jean Hutchinson, Public Relations Office
919-488-7110, Ext. 228

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.-----John Wayne Brown of Piscataway won the coveted L. Stacy Weaver Award at commencement exercises May 24 at Methodist College here, where the enrollment was 781 students last semester.

The award honors the first (and current) President at Methodist College and is presented annually at commencement to a graduating senior who has exemplified in personality and performance the highest degree of academic excellence, spiritual development, leadership and service, while at the college.

Since Methodist College opened in 1960, eight such awards have been presented. Brown is the third dormitory student to receive the award and the first out-of-state recipient.

Brown was graduated Cum Laude with a Bachelor of Arts degree in political science. He was among 150 graduates receiving degrees at the coeducational, liberal arts college.

Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Edison Brown of 14 Overbrook Road, Piscataway, N. J. A 1967 graduate of Piscataway High School, he served actively in all areas of college life.

As a freshman he was a dean's list student and defense attorney of his class.

As a sophomore he was a dean's list student, class defense attorney, soccer player, class dance chairman, and member of the judicial reforms committee.

As a junior he was class president until he resigned to become vice president of the Methodist College Student Government Association. A dean's list student again, he played soccer, was a delegate to the North Carolina Student Legislature, was a High Court justice, and was treasurer of his dormitory. Also, he was a student representative on the Faculty Committee on Athletics, president of the History and Political Science Club, and May Dance chairman.

As a senior Brown was president of the Student Government Association. He chaired the committee that conducted a study which resulted in the implementation of the "early-semester" revision of the academic calendar at Methodist. He was captain of the soccer team and earned All Conference Team honorable mention as goalie in the Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. A dean's list student, Brown represented Methodist again at the North Carolina Student Legislature in Raleigh. He served as a juvenile court counselor in Fayetteville while doing field work in a sociology course.

Prior to graduation, Brown and Elva Jess of Kensington, Md., were awarded Outstanding Senior Awards by the S.G.A. Senate for contributing to all phases of life at Methodist College.

"Miss Cheerleader U. S. A.," Barbi Blackwell, will be chief instructor for the East Coast Cheerleading Camp to be held at Methodist College this summer.

Miss Blackwell has been cheerleader for three years at Indiana State University, where she is a senior. She placed sixth in the nation in floor gymnastics in N. C. A. A. gymnastic trials recently. She was chosen "Miss Cheerleader U. S. A." at Cypress Gardens, Fla., in December, 1970.

The East Coast Cheerleading Camp is the first of its kind to be offered on the Atlantic coast. A non-profit program, it will feature extensive instruction in gymnastics and calisthenics. Dates of the camp are August 1-7.

Gene Clayton, Athletic Director and Basketball Coach at Methodist College is director of the camp. Mrs. Gwen Sykes, a high school teacher in Cumberland County and former chief cheerleader at Methodist College, is program director.

Mrs. Sykes said about the camp program, "It is completely modern and original. . . It meets the needs of today's cheerleaders. We have designed it especially to fill the need for organized leadership training of public school cheerleaders. . . Our purpose is to promote spirit and individuality in high school cheerleaders."

The three-phase program covers training through physical cheerleading skills, seminars on social aspects of cheerleading and "camaraderie" competition.

Extensive instruction in physical skills will cover 13 different jumps, chants, stunts, two-and-three-person balances, and pom-pom routines. A physical fitness program of calisthenics and gymnastics has been developed to increase individual suppleness, agility and flexibility. It will be coordinated by Mason Sykes, athletic coach at Methodist and assistant camp director.

Subjects of seminars to be held include: intersquad relations, make-up and hairstyling, cheerleading etiquette, crowd control and sports fundamentals, spirit booster techniques, and poster and art work. A fashion show and display of cheerleader uniforms and accessories will be held.

Intra-camp competition between groups and individuals will be held to promote originality and creativity. Awards will be presented.

Instruction for beginning and experienced cheerleaders will be offered. Male and female cheerleaders entering the seventh grade this fall or entering college as freshmen may participate in the camp. Applications are now being received.

All cheerleaders will be boarding campers in the four Methodist College dormitories, which are air-conditioned and will house up to 650 residents. College cheerleaders will serve as camp counselors. Methodist College faculty members will supervise the dormitories 24 hours daily.

Other instructors for the camp are Ed Morrow, chief college cheerleader, N. C. State University; Jill Stivers, Betty Bowers and Susan Trice, cheerleaders at N. C. State University; Carlos Quintero, cheerleader, Clemson University; Laura Rich, cheerleader, Lynchburg College; and others.

Additional details for the East Coast Cheerleading Camp are available from the camp director, Gene Clayton, at Methodist College.

EAST COAST CHEERLEADING CAMP

on the Campus of METHODIST COLLEGE

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. 28301

There has long been and remains a vital need for organized leadership training of cheerleaders in the public schools. Recognizing this need, Methodist College has embarked on a program we feel will be of great benefit to cheerleaders and the schools they represent--the East Coast Cheerleading Camp to be held August 1-7, 1971, on the campus of Methodist College in Fayetteville, North Carolina. Our purpose is to promote spirit and individuality in high school and junior high school cheerleaders.

✓ "Miss Cheerleader U.S.A.," Barbi Blackwell, will be chief instructor for the East Coast Cheerleading Camp to be held at Methodist College this summer.

Miss Blackwell has been cheerleader for three years at Indiana State University, where she is a senior. She placed sixth in the nation in floor gymnastics in N.C.A.A. gymnastic trials recently. She was chosen "Miss Cheerleader U.S.A." at Cypress Gardens, Fla., in December, 1970.

✓ The East Coast Cheerleading Camp is the first of its kind to be offered on the Atlantic coast. A non-profit program, it will feature extensive instruction in gymnastics and calisthenics. Dates of the camp are August 1 - 7.

Gene Clayton, athletic director and basketball coach at Methodist College is director of the camp. Mrs. Gwen Sykes, a high school teacher in Cumberland County and former chief cheerleader at Methodist College, is program director.

Mrs. Sykes said about the camp program, "It is completely modern and original...It meets the needs of today's cheerleaders. We have designed it especially to fill the need for organized leadership training of public school cheerleaders...Our purpose is to promote spirit and individuality in high school cheerleaders."

The three-phase program covers training through physical cheerleading skills, seminars on social aspects of cheerleading and "camaraderie" competition.

Extensive instruction in physical skills will cover 13 different jumps, chants, stunts, two- and three-person balances, and pom-pom routines. A physical fitness program of calisthenics and gymnastics has been developed to increase individual suppleness, agility and flexibility. It will be coordinated by Mason Sykes, athletic coach at Methodist and assistant camp director.

Subjects of seminars to be held include: intersquad relations, make-up and hairstyling, cheerleading etiquette, crowd control and sports fundamentals, spirit booster techniques, and poster and art work. A fashion show and display of cheerleader uniforms and accessories will be held.

Intra-camp competition between groups and individuals will be held to promote originality and creativity. Awards will be presented.

Instruction for beginning and experienced cheerleaders will be offered. Male and female cheerleaders entering the seventh grade this fall or entering college as freshmen may participate in the camp. Applications are now being received.
