INTERVIEW: Dean Samuel J. Womack, Academic Dean of Students at Methodist College.

PURPOSE: To tell the community about the academic areas of MC and inform them of some of our newest innovations.

1. Methodist College is a four year, co-educational, liberal arts college. What does it mean to say MC is a liberal arts college?
2. How many majors are offered at Methodist and in what areas?
3. It is often said that a small private college should be more adaptable to change and new innovations. Would you tell us in what ways Methodist College is an innovator?
4. You've told us about the innovative programs already in operation for regular students, what opportunities does Methodist College offer military personnel?
5. How would you rank Methodist College academically among other colleges its size?
6. Is Methodist College a good investment for the Fayetteville and Cumberland County community?

FAYETTEVILLE_____ With outstanding enthusiasm and team spirit, the 1973 Methodist College Baseball Team is anticipating a promising season, says Coach Bruce Shelley. With the first game of the season tomorrow against Atlantic Christian College, the Monarchs will have the opportunity to uphold their victorious pre-season scrimmage record. Two earlier games, cancelled because of inclement weather this week, have been re-scheduled against Elon College and Guilford College.

The Methodist College club and baseball field have a new look this spring- eight new players and new bleachers. "Each of the guys worked on the field, improving the grounds and building bleachers," Coach Shelley said. "This is one of the finest groups I've ever worked with," he emphasized.

Newcomers to the ball club include four pitchers: Sam Toler of Hope Mills; Les Coburn from Arlington, Va.; Johnny Mc Millen of Parkton; and Dennis Adderholt from Charlotte. Other positions include: Randy Lail, catcher from Asheboro; and second basemen, Fred Puryear, Raleigh; Doug Nichol, Rutherford, N.J.; and Bobby Cobb, Fayetteville.

FAYETTEVILLE _____ Donald Green, Methodist College art instructor, will be the featured artist at St. John's Art Gallery in Wilmington through March 30.

With a B.F.A. degree in painting and sculpture from Illinois Wesleyan University and the M.F.A. degree in sculpture from the University of Wisconsin, Green's exhibit is comprised of sculptures of steel, paintings and drawings. "My work is generally totally non-objective, made up basically of geometric forms, done in various media, particularly welded steel and cast concrete, in addition to paintings and drawings. The inspiration for my work, especially sculpture, may come from my interest in architecture and generally the strong, solid products man has created as well as in the forces of nature and their effects on man and his products," Green said of his work.

Green organizes many exhibits of local artists and photographers for Methodist College's Reeves Auditorium. Presently on display is the Eleanor Howell art show and a photo collection by Thomas E. Knott.

FAYETTEVILLE _____ From the walls of Methodist College to the steps of Cinderella's Castle, the Methodist College Chorus will join in the fantasy whirl of Florida's Walt Disney World March 29 for the highlight performance of this year's Spring Concert Tour.

According to Chorus Director Alan M. Porter, the 46 voice student group will embark on its annual concert tour during the college's spring break. March 27 marks the first performance at the Sunset Park United Methodist Church in Wilmington. From there the bus will travel to Jacksonville, Fla. and on to Walt Disney World at Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

The MC Chorus, a select group of students representing eight states, is well known in Eastern North Carolina for its "sincere and spirited performances, and for its high quality music in a variety of styles." The program of sacred music includes great choral works from various historical periods in addition to several contemporary selections by Burt Bacharach and Irving Berlin. While some pieces will be voices only, the chorus will be accompanied at times by piano, organ, flute and percussion.

North Carolina Student Legislature Convention
Release before March 27

Kari Michele Hagan, Public Relations 488-7110

FAYETTEVILLE _____ No doubt general assembly ears will perk up in Raleigh this week as students representing more than 25 North Carolina colleges and universities converge on the capital city for the annual North Carolina Student Legislature (NCSL) convention March 28 through April 1.

Eight Methodist College delegates headed by Chairman Jeff Olson will join the throng of students giving up a Spring Break trip to the beach or home, for five days of lawmaking. When asked why students are willing to devote months of their free time to researching and organizing bills, Olson replied, "NCSL is a way to voice opinions for college students." Contrary to what one might think, students are interested in laws pertaining to everybody, not only youth. Methodist College, with its history of proposals concerning the aged, has devised a current bill granting property tax relief to certain aged persons. Recently passed by the general assembly was a bill similar to last year's Methodist College proposal providing for the abolishment of the North Carolina Lien Law, which prohibited those receiving aid to the aged and disabled from owning real property. A second bill prepared this year by the MC squad is entitled "Divorce by Mutual Consent."

Olson described his delegation's work for the aged as a sincere effort to stop discrimination against those productive people over 65. A former Methodist College NCSL leader explained, "We are concerned (for older adults) because we will be in the same position later and need to initiate a new program now." Countless authentic cases have been uncovered during NCSL research. Many resemble the one in which an elderly lady was forced to sell her lifetime home because the assessed value of her downtown property had soared so high she could no longer pay her property taxes. After discussing cases like these with the county tax clerk, the Methodist College lawmakers voted to work up the present bill on property tax relief for the aged.

Many ask what success a "mock" student legislature session can have in swaying the real lawmakers. In the first place NCSLers become "fit to tie" when labeled "pol parrots" in a "mock" legislature. Clearly the student legislature meetings have evolved into an important lobby-protest effort where concerned students protest existing laws by proposing changes for their improvement. Putting a bill together "isn't easy" in Olson's words. To the average student legal jargon can be very confusing. Before a bill is ready for presentation, delegation members will spend many long hours reading, comparing our laws with other states, interviewing related officials and refining it into finished form.

Our State Legislature must listen when NCSL comes to town since half the bills presented by the student group in the past four years have later been passed in some form by the general assembly. Perhaps one reason for the assembly's respect lies in the fact that many were once members of NCSL themselves. Governor Jim Holshouser, a former NCSL delegate, will host a reception at the governor's mansion to honor the group this week.

Fayetteville students active in the Methodist College NCSL group are: Jeff Olson, chairman; Jim Hundley, and Becky McDiarmid. Other NCSL members include: Alice Stuckey, Raleigh; Mike Twiddy, Belcross; Mike Casey, Williamsburg, Va.; Dave Russell, Springfield, Va.; and Al Hare, Somerville, N.J. The 1972 statewide president of NCSL was a graduate of Methodist College, Tommy Smith. Serving as state recording secretary is MC senior Winnie McBryde of Fayetteville.
