M C E CONOMICS PROFESSOR
WILL SPEAK ON WATER RESOURCES

FAYETTEVILLE _____ Dr. Sudhakar Gautam, Methodist College associate professor of economics, will address the second annual national symposium on Societal Problems of Water Resources in Chicago April 28. The symposium is sponsored by the Illinois Earth Science Association.

In the paper he will present, Dr. Gautam points out two important findings for his native country India. "The long held belief that irrigation increases wealth for all (Indian) farmers is not true," he stressed. "It only increases the wealth of the already rich farmers at the cost of the poor landless farmers; therefore, irrigation is detrimental to the socialistic objective of equitable distribution of income and wealth."

In his second point, the economist-professor said India may be headed toward a protein crisis. "Although agriculture production (India) is increasing, it is creating a protein crisis. For several reasons, farmers are growing more and more high yielding crops (wheat, sugar cane and cotton), thus using up the land which previously grew rich protein crops like peanuts and soybeans."

Dr. Gautam said this "trend of substituting high yield crops for nutritional produce is developing in many of the countries in that part of the world."

Dr. Gautam will present his paper before the convention to be held at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare Hotel, after which the paper will be considered for publication.

He has written over 30 papers and books on the subject of Indian economy.
