Methodist College's summer session is bursting at the seams.

According to Dr. Fred C. McDavid, summer school director, "we now have more than 800 registrations for the entire session, which is more than 200 over last year...and we've received more for the second term(which is now in session), and for the third term, a directed study program, which begins July 15."

Professor of education and psychology and chairman of the education and psychology department, Dr. McDavid explained that "we're teaching more courses than ever before. A student may now earn 15 semester hours during the three summer sessions...and with the permission of the dean, even earn 18 to 21 semester hours."

Dr. McDavid sees a positive attitude toward the summer session, which has grown tremendously. "And the schedule is much more flexible than before," the director explained.

A survey shows popular courses to include ^Ceconomics, religion, minority relations, psychology of personal adjustment, educational psychology, special research topics, science courses and health in the elementary schools.

"Carolina College, though closed, continues to surge forward in the lives of its alumnae through spirit, tradition, leadership and character."

Addressing the annual reunion Saturday, June 15, of the Carolina College Alumnae, Methodist College President, Dr. Richard W. Pearce, said, "you (the alumnae) understand that education is far more than learning to make a living...it is preparation to make a life."

He said that private, church involved colleges must build character. They must educate with standards...moral, ethical, spiritual, with leadership by an involved student life program and through teaching our tradition as a guidepost for the future. We at Methodist College are proud of your adopting us as your alma mater for we hope to continue that kind of concerned, involved education that made you strong...education that is not just minds alone, but also character, leadership and tradition."

Some 60 Carolina College Alumnae attended the reunion festivities, held at Methodist College.

A three-foot column, the only part of the Carolina Hall building to survive the Nov. 8, 1973, fire, was presented to the Alumnae Association by Mrs. Dorothy Collins of Maxton.
