AMERICANS SHOULD NOT FEAR IMMIGRATION SAY MC SPEAKERS

Americans have nothing to fear from the Vietnam immigrants according to two speakers at Methodist College Tuesday night. In fact, all immigrants should be welcomed because their presence usually benefits everyone they concluded.

Dr. Richard Bardolph, chairman of the History Department at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro, and Roy Parker Jr., editor of the Fayetteville Times, spoke to an audience of about 150 in the first of four community forums concerning the "American Dream."

Dr. Bardolph characterized the immigrants who have come to America. "They were not typical of the country from whence they came," he noted. "The lazy, rich, pessimists stayed in Europe while America inherited optimists willing to work hard at any labor for the lowest of wages."

The history of immigration really begins in 1890 and ends in 1930 when a million immigrants a year sailed to the United States in each of the 40 years. In contrast only 250,000 immigrated in the hundred years from 1670-1770.

"At the turn of the century one-sixth of the population was immigrant. However, they did one-fourth of the work and represented one-third of the labor force," said Dr. Bardolph. At this time it was calculated that every time an immigrant landed on our shores the gross national product went up $1,500.

Immigrants, even today, have a "wedge effect," said Dr. Bardolph i.e. they usually take jobs at the bottom of the economic scale thus pushing native workers up the economic ladder.

Parker restricted his comments to the local scene specifically the native black and white populations of North Carolina. He painted an optimistic picture of the present and future and, although the term "American Dream" may be overworked, reaffirmed his belief in it for all races.

Both rejected the melting pot concept of American society as well as the separate but equal doctrine for immigrants. American society, they concluded, is a salad bowl--a whole with identifiable parts contained within.

Three more community forums on American society and the American dream will be offered in the coming months at Methodist College. The research project is funded by a $4,000 grant from the North Carolina Humanities Committee.

METHODIST COLLEGE DESIGNATED
OFFICIAL BICENTENNIAL CAMPUS

FAYETTEVILLE--Methodist College officially became a recognized bicentennial campus in impressive ceremonies Wednesday morning during a special College Convocation.

Dr. Lawrence Wheeler, representing the North Carolina Bicentennial Commission, presented to President Richard W. Pearce an official bicentennial flag and certificate. He then gave a short talk on the influence of colleges on the Revolutionary War effort.

Representing the Fayetteville-Cumberland County Bicentennial Commission was Mrs. Dan Reeves. Also present were senior Tony Mabb of Fayetteville, president of the Methodist College Bicentennial Committee and Parker Wilson, adviser to the group. Student Government Association President Danny Hood of Durham served as master of ceremonies.

The Fort Bragg Bicentennial Color Guard, dressed in Revolutionary War era uniforms, presented the colors and then stood at attention as the Methodist College Stage Band played a medley of patriotic songs.

The flags of the 13 original states were presented to the college and a short history of each state read. Under the sponsorship of the Student Government Association the flags were purchased by various clubs, fraternities, and sororities on campus. Also presented to the college was a United States flag which has flown over the Capitol in Washington. This is a gift from U. S. Congressman Charles Rose.

The flags are now on display in the Student Union along with a "Freedom Shrine" showing important national historical documents.

REGISTRATION IN PROGRESS FOR METHODIST COLLEGE NIGHT SCHOOL

FAYETTEVILLE--Registration for the spring semester of Methodist College's night school is now being conducted during the school's regular operating hours, according to Director of Admissions Thomas Yow.

Yow further stated that interested persons who are unable to register during these hours may register Saturday, January 17, from 9 a.m. until noon in the Horner Administration Building. Term I will begin January 19 and end March 4.

Methodist College offers its night school students the opportunity to earn a full semester's college credit each semester. This is achieved through the use of two terms each semester in which the student may earn six semester-hours each term. Full-time night school students may be eligible for federal and state financial aid grants.

Classes meet on a Monday-Wednesday and Tuesday-Thursday basis from 7-10 p.m. on the campus. Courses to be offered Term I on Monday and Wednesday include French Culture, Introduction to Philosophy, Introduction to Religion, Social Services and Principles of Marketing.

Classes to be offered on Tuesday and Thursday during Term I include Finite Math for Business and Social Sciences, United States History I, Adolescent Psychology, Social Psychology, and Principles of Finance.

Courses for Term II which begins March 8 and ends April 29

FAYETTEVILLE MAYOR TO ADDRESS

METHODIST'S WINTER COMMENCEMENT

Newly elected Mayor Beth Finch will address the December graduating class of Methodist College this Sunday (Dec. 21) in graduation exercises scheduled to begin at 2:30 in Reeves Auditorium on campus.

Dr. Samuel J. Womack, dean, said 45 students are candidates for degrees--40 for the bachelor of arts, four for the bachelor of science and one for the bachelor of applied science.

Immediately following the graduation exercises, the Methodist College faculty will host a reception in the lobby of the Fine Arts Building for graduates and their families.

Mrs. Pat Prescott of Fayetteville will be the first student from Methodist College to receive the bachelor of applied science degree. She will graduate with a major in nursing with a double minor in education/English. The bachelor of applied science degree is a baccalaureate degree program for students already holding an associate or associate in applied science degree.

Mrs. Finch, who was elected mayor in November, is the first woman mayor of a major North Carolina city. Prior to her election, she served two terms on the city council beginning in 1971.

She attended high school in Blackstone, Va., and received a bachelor of arts degree in sociology from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. After graduation, she became a reporter for the Dunn Dispatch and later the Fayetteville Observer. In 1967 she went into business with her husband.

Mrs. Finch is a member of the Transportation Advisory Committee, is president

MC DEAN ANNOUNCES

NEW DEGREE PROGRAM

Dr. Samuel Womack, dean of academic affairs, today announced that a new program will be instituted at Methodist College. Starting in January, students may enroll in an associate of arts degree program.

The two-year program will require at least 64 semester-hours of academic credits. The AA degree student must fulfill all of the college's general requirements of 59-63 semester-hours and must complete a minimum of 15 semester-hours in residence. In order to graduate students must achieve a grade-point-average of 2.0 or better on their total program and on all academic work done in residence at Methodist College.

AA candidates will be able to enroll in the night school as well as the regular schedule of classes. Those interested in applying for this new degree must register specifically for the AA program at the time of enrollment.

After obtaining the associate in arts degree, a student may enter the baccalaureate program at the junior class level standing if one so desires.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION CURRICULUM AT METHODIST COLLEGE APPROVED

FAYETTEVILLE--Methodist College has been notified by Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, that the physical education curriculum at the college has received approval from the State Board of Education.

The physical education curriculum was begun in September, 1974, and offers three options of study: (1) a physical education major with a minor in biology and teacher education certifying the prospective teacher to teach both subjects on the secondary level, (2) a physical education major with emphasis on recreational administration and activities, and (3) a major in physical education in the secondary and elementary schools with specialization in elementary school physical education.

Although only slightly over a year old, the department is already well established on campus. Each member of the five-member department, in addition to teaching duties, also coaches at least one varsity sport. Currently there are 26 majors and 12 minors in the department.

Fayetteville Mayor Beth 'Finch urged the graduating class of Methodist College to "become concerned and involved with government" in her commencement address to the winter graduating class yesterday afternoon.

Noting that this is a time of gift giving--Christmas, the college giving diplomas, Mrs. Finch gave the 41 graduates the gift of American government.

"No area of your life is not touched by government either directly or indirectly," she noted. "Therefore my gift to you is your government. It's fallen on hard times lately, but I know that you can recycle and reclaim this gift."

She said that many of the problems of government can be traced to citizen neglect as well as the more obvious abuses of government by special interest groups and officeholders.

"Become concerned about your government. Become involved with your government, but temper both concepts with patience," Mrs. Finch concluded.

Methodist College conferred the bachelor of arts degree upon 36 seniors, the bachelor of science degree upon four seniors, and the bachelor of applied science upon one student.

Mrs. Pat Prescott of Fayetteville received the first bachelor of applied science degree ever awarded by the college. Her major was nursing, and she had a double minor in English/education.

Mrs. Gail Miller of Fayetteville graduated summa cum laude (3.75 grade point average or better of a possible 4.00) and had the highest grade point average of any student in the graduating class. Four students graduated magna cum laude (grade point average
