Gregory joined the staff of the Bank of Halifax in 1956. When that bank merged into Branch Banking and Trust Company in 1968, he was named a vice-president, elected to the Board of Directors and assigned to the Wilson Office for several months. In 1969 he was transferred to Raleigh and named officer in charge there in 1970.

Gregory served five terms as a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives and during successive sessions was committee chairman of Federal and Interstate Cooperation, Banks and Banking, Highway Safety and Finance. He has served on the Advisory Budget Commission, the Federal and Interstate Cooperation Commission, as a member of the Governor's Commission on Aviation and the Atlantic States Marine and Fisheries Commission and the North Carolina Board of Higher Education.

Gregory is on the board of directors of the North Carolina Bankers Association and is currently serving as chairman of the Government Relations Council of the association. He is chairman of the Legislative Committee of the North Carolina Citizens Association and serves on its board of directors. He is a member of the board of the Medical Foundation of N.C. Inc., the Business Foundation of N.C. Inc., and of the Roanoke River Basin Association.

Mrs. Gregory is the former Hester Lockett of Brenham, Texas. The Gregorys and their four children reside in Wilson.

METHODIST COLLEGE AGAIN OFFERING PACE EXAM PREPARATION COURSE

FAYETTEVILLE--Due to the success of the fall course offering, the Methodist College Continuing Education division will again offer the PACE examination preparation course in January.

Many positions in the U.S. Civil Service require a satisfactory score on the PACE examination. The course teaches shortcut methods for solving mathematical problems, how to interpret written passages and extract essential information, and how to understand analogies in both grammar and geometric designs.

The cost will again be $20 for the eight-hour course which will meet from 7:30-9:30 p.m. on Jan. 10, 13, 17 and 20 in the Trustees Classroom Building on campus.

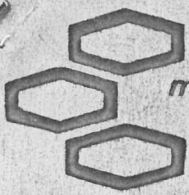

The instructor again will be Colonel Cleatus J. Cox, deputy installation commander, Ft. Bragg, and admission is open to anyone interested.

Registration is now being conducted weekdays from 9-5 in the office of continuing education, Horner Administration Building. Registration can also be accomplished through the mails.

For additional information contact the director of the continuing education division, telephone 488-7110 ext. 221.

MORAVIAN LOVE FEAST

HOSTED BY METHODIST

FAYETTEVILLE--One of North Carolina's oldest religious observances was celebrated at Hensdale Chapel on the Methodist College campus Dec. 12.

A Christmas Moravian love feast was sponsored by Koinonia, the student religious fellowship at Methodist College.

"The Christmas eve love feast is one of the biggest events of the year in the Winston-Salem area," says Rick Wilson, a Moravian student at Methodist College who coordinated the event. "At my home church in Winston-Salem's Trinity Moravian Church with a seating capacity of over 500 we usually have to have two feasts to accommodate all the visitors.

"North Carolina Moravians are centered around the Winston-Salem area, and people come from all over the South to partake of the love feast," says Wilson.

Although the history of the Moravian love feast goes back to 1727, it was first celebrated in North Carolina in 1762 at Bethabara, near Winston-Salem, soon after the Moravian settlement there was founded as one of the first communities in North Carolina.

"Although the food and drink are not consecrated, it is considered a religious service for the purpose of friendship and fellowship," says Wilson.

"The candlelight service is basically a hymn service with the only 'sermon' being an explanation of the love feast and its history. The words of the hymns, which are predominantly traditional Christmas hymns, are the message of the service," says Wilson. Special music is also heard during the eating of the meal.

The history of the love feast goes back to the Agape Feasts of the fifth century church. The Agape Feasts disappeared in the dark ages, but were revived in Herrnhut, Germany, in 1727 by the Moravian Saxon, Count Zinzendorf, after a penecostal experience "... to give my people a real sense of fellowship and a way to sense this fellowship. I acknowledge no Christianity without fellowship."

John Wesley came to know the Moravians well in Georgia. He said, "They were always employed, always cheerful themselves and in good humor with one another." After visiting in Herrnhut, Wesley added, "I would gladly have spent my life here..."

Again leading the service was the Reverend Philip Bauguess, associate minister of Winston-Salem's Trinity Moravian Church. He is a 1972 graduate of Methodist College and a 1975 graduate of Moravian Theological Seminary, Bethlehem, Penn.

NEW ATHLETIC FIELDS

BEING BUILT AT MC

FAYETTEVILLE--Methodist College is in the midst of some major construction work which is designed to improve the present physical education, intramural and intercollegiate athletic facilities on campus.

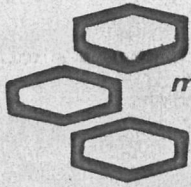

Three projects currently underway are the construction of ~~an asphalt~~ track around an enlarged soccer field, the leveling of two new intramural fields, and the construction of new concrete basketball-volleyball courts.

The soccer field is being enlarged by 75 yards and a quarter-mile track is being built around it, making possible home track meets and a more extensive track program. A track team was formed two years ago, and is now coached by Joe Miller.

The two intramural fields being built southeast of the tennis courts behind the Student Union will provide a place for intramural sports such as flag football and softball. These fields will be seeded with grass.

The outdoor basketball-volleyball courts will be located northeast of the Student Union in the area known in the past as the "bonfire area." The concrete surface, 150 x 75 yards, will provide an area for playing intramural basketball and volleyball as well as other recreational activities such as roller skating.

Athletic Director Gene Clayton is "extremely excited" with the improvements. He sees convenience as the main advantage to these projects. "Bringing all the facilities closer together also brings them to the main campus, to the spectator, and to shower and dressing facilities and equipment," he says.

MC WINTER GRADUATION

EXERCISES ARE SUNDAY

FAYETTEVILLE--John C. Mitchell, retired president of Rohm and Haas North Carolina Inc., will be the graduation speaker Sunday afternoon to the winter graduating class of Methodist College.

Thirty-six seniors are candidates for degrees: 28 for the bachelor of arts, six for the bachelor of science, and two for the bachelor of applied science. The graduation exercises are scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. in Reeves Auditorium.

A unique feature of this graduating class is that, for the first time, two Evening College students are candidates for degrees. The Evening College was begun in September, 1975.

Prior to becoming president of Rohm and Haas North Carolina Inc., Mitchell was plant manager of the Fayetteville Plant which he built, staffed and operated for the Rohm and Haas Company. The plant eventually grew to two million square feet, investment reached over $200 million, and employment swelled to 2,600 in the early seventies.

"It was the most exciting and rewarding challenge of my career, seeing this huge installation rise from a tobacco and cotton patch and developing from rural recruits unschooled in industry requirements, a team of loyal, productive workers," Mitchell says.

After graduating from Alma College, Alma, Mich., he did graduate work at Pennsylvania State University while on the staff of the university and in the employ of the Rohm and Haas Co.

His research concentrated on distillation of petroleum and solvent extraction of lubricating oils, on additives that were viscosity index improvers and pour point depressors and on separating mono-di- and tri-methylamines by solvent extraction with water. These processes all became commercially successful.

After leaving Penn. State, Mitchell worked 12 years in research and development and then was promoted to area supervisor of the chemical division production department.

Since retirement in 1975, Mitchell has accepted management consultant assignments, a recent one being three months in Manila, Phillipines, applying administrative skills to line and staff and corporate problems.

Mitchell is a member of the board of directors of the Boys Club, Fayetteville Area Chamber of Commerce and First Union National Bank. In 1975 he was elected Man of the Year for outstanding service toward civic, industrial and cultural development of Fayetteville and Cumberland County.

He is married to the former Rita Nocella and they have two daughters-- both graduates of Harvard University and now pursuing graduate studies.

METHODIST HOLDS WINTER GRADUATION

Thirty-two seniors received baccalaureate degrees in graduation exercises Sunday (Dec. 19, 1976) afternoon at Methodist College.

Eddie J. Washington of Fayetteville received his bachelor of arts degree as the first graduate of the evening college division. His major was business administration.

John C. Mitchell, retired president of Rohm and Haas North Carolina Inc., gave the graduation address. He advised the graduates to realize that their diplomas meant only that they are now "desirable starting material." Long-term success, he said, is determined by many factors other than education such as: loyalty, dependability, industriousness, acting instead of reacting and listening.

"But you must still feel successful to really be successful," Mitchell noted. "Otherwise, you'll just be another unhappy rich person."

He concluded by advising the graduates to set realistic five-year goals, work toward them, and not dwell on the mistakes that will inevitably occur.

Graduating at the top of the class was Kelfala M. Kallon of Freetown, Sierra Leone, West Africa. He graduated summa cum laude.
