Feature article on Cheryl King

by Hollie Hutchison

Cheryl King is a young woman with a multi-faceted personality, and her senior recital in Hensdale Chapel last Wednesday night confirmed this idea. Her vocal selections ranged from the somber Brahms Alto Rhapsody to the light, farciacial I Hâte Music bby Leonard Berstein.

"The Rhapsody was the focal point of my recital," Cheryl stated. "I first heard it performed 7 years ago, and it has been my goal ever since. The piece is written for solo voice with male chorus and is really moving and exciting composition."

Many music students spend their entire college career worrying about their senior recital. Cheryl is an exception. "A recital is a terrific responsibility. Non-music majors just can't comprehend the work and preparation that must go into a performance like this. I feel that at this point in my study, I was ready for it, although I had a few anxious moments," she admitted.

Her vocal selections included many 20th-century compositions for mezzo soprano. Cheryl particularly enjoys performing and listening to contemporary music. "I feel that Methodist College and other schools put too much emphasis on early music, that of Bach and Beethoven. Modern composers have been really neglected. Here, we don't have the equipment necessary for studying this music, to learn about it."

"Composers in the past have been largely ignored in their own lifetimes. We're doing the same thing today."

One of Cheryl's favorite composers, John Cage, has been severely criticized as a "gimick composer" by many of his contemporaries because of such composition as 4 Minutes and 33 Seconds, where the pianist simply sits at the piano for that period of time in total silence, only turning pages of blank music. "I agree with his definition that music is sound and silence through time. If the performer is only counting rests for the duration of the piece," Cheryl argues, "then he is still creating music."

She feels that computerized music is art in that it is still controlled by the human mind. "The human being programs the computer to produce, so that the elements fed into the computer are dictated by the human mind and are not totally created by machine. I think it's exciting."

Cheryl, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winfred King of Fayetteville, is a graduate of 71st High School. She spent her first 2 years of college at Atlantic Christian where she studied voice under Robert Daniels. Since her transfer to Methodist, she has studied with Alan Porter. "I've really enjoyed my study with him, and I've learned a lot from him," she said.

Regarding her future plans, Cheryl is hesitant. "I asked myself once what do I want to do for a challenge in life?" I'm not really sure, but I would like to be affiliated with music in some way."

Cheryl is definitely for women's liberation. "I think equality is a better word choice. Any girl who is in college and would say that she is not for women's equality is ridiculous. What woman wants to enter the business world with the same degree as a man and be discriminated against because there are not equal job opportunities for her?"

A song Cheryl sang in her recital seems to echo her thoughts. It is composed by Leonard Bernstein and is entitled I'm a Person, Too.

A husband-wife team are refugees from Vietnam who left the day that Saigon fell; a Kenyan student plans to attend Columbia School of Medicine before returning home; Iranian students are amused by the culture differences; etc.

Married students are prevelant on college campuses in increasing numbers, especially student couples where both are full-time students. At Methodist, a student couple just made Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities--unique in that both made it the same year. In one couple, both husband and wife are full-time Army officers and full-time students. The husband, Larry Ficklin, was just selected "Soldier of the Month" of the 5th Command Brigade. In another couple, the husband is active in the Physical Education department, while his wife is currently the president of the College Chorus and is expecting her first child in May. Most of these couples work on campus to supplement income. Problems and solutions might be a focus, as well as what happens upon graduation when both hit the job market?

Sunday services in Hensdale Chapel are a microcasm of interdenominational religion. A college maintenance man in his Sunday best keeps a tally of worshippers; the congregation reflects all levels of education, occupation, nationality, religion, age, and economic level; the campus minister frequently intersperses his sermon with an acappella rendering of relevant hymns; and through it all--a sense of unity of purpose.

If I can help you with any of these ideas, just let me know.
Happy holidays!

MORAVIAN LOVE FEAST

TO BE HELD AT METHODIST

FAYETTEVILLE-- Traditions abound at Christmastime--from the secular tree-trimming to the elaborate religious celebration of mass. Somewhere between these are the simple religious celebrations like the lighting of the Advent candles and the Moravian Love Feast.

Celebration of the traditional Moravian Love Feast will be held on Sunday night, ^{Dec. 2 80'clock} ~~Dec. 4~~ at 9:00 in Hensdale Chapel on the Methodist College campus.

The Reverend Phil Bauguess, pastor of Olivett Moravian Church in Winston-Salem, and the Reverend Rick Wilson, pastor of Trinity Moravian Church in Winston-Salem will conduct the candlelight service.

The Love Feast is celebrated with the sharing of Moravian Sweet Rolls and coffee in a ritual lighted by candles of purest beeswax, symbolizing the purity of Christ.

The Moravian Love Feast is a symbolic celebration of an historic event in the Moravian Church, although the Feast is now celebrated by all denominations as part of the Christmas season.

HENSDALE CHAPEL PROVIDES INTERDENOMINATIONAL WORSHIP

FAYETTEVILLE--As you enter the doors of Hensdale Chapel on Sunday morning for a regular worship service, John Paul carefully adds you to his tally of worshipers. All dressed in his Sunday best, John Paul hardly looks the role of a maintenance man on the Methodist College campus, where he has worked for five years.

Ushering you to your pew is the Dean of Men or a star soccer player, depending on the aisle you choose. All members of the college community have an opportunity to participate in services; sometimes as ushers, sometimes as readers of Scripture, sometimes as acolytes.

The congregation around you is as diverse as it is attractive. "If the world were a cake, we would have part of every slice in our chapel," says Paul Granger, campus minister.

From Persian to Filipino, from ages 3 to 81, from laborer to professor--they are all there.

Hensdale Chapel is designated an interdenominational house of worship. The presence of Buddhists, Baptists, Episcopalians, Roman Catholics, Shintoists and various other denominations is evidence of that designation.

Yet, the order of worship is Methodist in form and the title Methodist Hymnal graces the songbooks.

METHODIST WOMEN

DON'T KNOW HOW

TO LOSE

FAYETTEVILLE--With the Methodist College Women's Tennis Team standing 24-0 over three seasons and the Methodist Volleyball Team being the North Carolina State Champions, the pressure is really on the Women's Basketball Team to continue the tradition of superiority in women's athletics the Fayetteville school has established.

And they are ready to do just that.

From the 4th ranked team in the state last year, Coach Mason Sykes has returning only three starters. That's the bad news. He has seven top recruits, including transfer Elaine Adams from Louisburg, and that's the good news.

Priscilla Warren, Anita Graves, and Jeannie Edwards return from last year's squad and will be a big part of the plan to cop the state title that eluded them in a overtime loss to Atlantic Christian in the State Tournament.

Warren guided the 1976 squad from her point guard position, scoring 18 points per game. Graves and Edwards played the forward for the Monarchs last season averaging 14 and 11 points per contest. Graves was also the leading rebounder on last year's squad pulling down 16 rebounds per game.

Elaine Adams and Liz Chiles are the leading newcomers on this year's team, filling the center and guard spots. Adams is a junior college standout from Louisburg, while Chiles is a freshman from Pine Forest Senior High School. Another probable starter is Cindy Simpkins who was sixth player last year.

"We have a lot of good ball players on this squad," Sykes said. "Competition is keen for a starting position, and presently those positions are still to be determined. We will probably go with eight or nine people during the game. With the type of defenses we run, that kind of depth is certainly useful."

Sykes plans on running a man-to-man defense using half-court zone presses and 1-3-1 zones.

"Our strengths should be defense and speed," continues Sykes. "It will be tough to equal last year's 14-4 record. Our four losses were by a total of 6 points and two of those went into overtime. There is a possibility that we could not match the previous record and still qualify for the state tournament."

The Monarchs face a tougher schedule this year meeting Campbell College, St. Augustine who was first in the CIAA last year, Elizabeth City

State and Pembroke twice each.

This does not dampen the Monarch mentor, however.

"I feel confident about the team," Sykes enthused. "With the potential we have, we can beat any opponent we face if we play good ball." Besides, it is a prestigious thing to be a woman athlete at Methodist College-- they are winners all the way. This team plans to keep it that way. "

The Monarchs open against Pembroke on Tuesday and play their first home game on Wednesday, December 7 against UNC-Wilmington.

MONARCHS NAMED TO

ALL-CONFERENCE SOCCER TEAM

FAYETTEVILLE--Two Methodist College soccer players have been named to the 1977 Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Association All-Conference Team by vote of the conference coaches.

Center forward Marty Martin of Tacoma, Washington, and goalkeeper Jeff Deitz of Palmyra, New Jersey, were named to the elite squad after leading the Monarchs to a 4-2-1 league mark and a 5-6-2 overall record.

Martin, a transfer from Bellevue Community College in Bellevue, Washington, was the leading scorer for the Monarchs this season scoring 12 goals total, including two goals against Virginia Wesleyan in Methodist's 2-1 Homecoming win over the Marlins.

"Marty's selection shows the adaptability of an excellent soccer player to a change of position with a minimal amount of adjustment," commented Methodist coach Mason Sykes.

Martin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack W. Martin of Tacoma and attended Stadium High School where he was captain of the Stadium soccer team his senior year. He is majoring in physical education at Methodist.

Deitz, in his first year as a Monarch starter averaged 8 saves per contest and had two shutouts back to back against UNC-Greensboro and Greensboro College of 5-0 and 2-0, respectively.

Opposing teams scored an average of only 1.5 goals against Deitz during the season.

"The selection of Jeff Deitz as All-Conference goalie illustrates exactly what desire and hard work can do in a period of one year. Jeff worked extremely hard in the 1977 off-season to prepare himself for the starting goal position he wanted," stated Sykes.

Methodist also placed three players on the Honorable Mention Team for the DIAC. Bruce Fritz, junior fullback, along with Larry Buffaloe, senior fullback, and Dave McNair, sophomore forward, reaped second team honors.

Buffaloe, who hails from Raleigh, scored one goal during the season against Atlantic Christian College in a 1-1 tie, an unusual feat for a fullback from the field.

Dave McNair, from Marietta, Georgia, complemented Martin on the offense from his forward position and added three goals to the Methodist effort.

Bruce Fritz, team captain, played with Martin at Stadium High School in Tacoma, Washington. He has led the team for two years in his position as captain.

"I nominated a Methodist player for every position," asserts Sykes, "which should speak for the depth of our team."

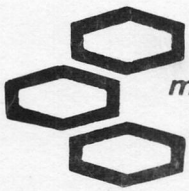

"In our conference, with the number of outstanding players who were involved in the 8-team league, I am very pleased to have two players other coaches found impressive enough to be All-Conference."

Methodist joined four other conference schools in placing two players on the first team.

"I am also pleased to have three Honorable Mention players-- it shows some of the depth we have. We depend on team play and team concept to win. It is interesting that all the selections from Methodist were players who performed down the middle of the field in the formation we use," the Monarch mentor stated.

"Not only in athletics, but in their personal attitude and values, I believe these young men exemplify the best qualities of young people today."
