METHODIST SCARES #1-RANKED
KNIGHTS; LOSES 100-84

Methodist Monarchs, led by the awesome scoring of forward James Green, kept the pressure on through the DIAC conference game with #1-ranked St. Andrews College of Laurinburg before falling to the Knights 100-84.

The Knights played to a home crowd of 1000 fans who acclaimed the #1 national ranking of the St. Andrews team in the NCAA Division III polls. Will Petersen of SA led the scoring with 41 points to no-one's great surprise.

Methodist was a surprise, however, as the scrappy Monarchs made a valiant rally in the second half to outscore the Knights 22-10 at one point. Coming from a 51-34 halftime score, the Monarchs closed the score 86-75 with 4:28 left in the game. Even the hot hand of James Green, sophomore from Vanceboro, NC who connected for 34 points, couldn't bring the Methodist team any closer.

"This game was the best one of my life," said Green. "I had a couple of 30-point games during my freshman season, but this is by far the best." Green played his high school ball at West Craven.

The loss brought the Monarch record to 2-14 overall and 1-6 in the DIAC, following an earlier loss to Averett at Averett. Methodist trailed by 4 at halftime, 37-33 and despite a 14-point effort by Don Stewart went on to lose the game by the same margin, 73-69.

METHODIST COLLEGE DAY PROCLAIMED

Mayor Bill Hurley of Fayetteville has proclaimed Thursday, February 18, 1982 as Methodist College Day in Fayetteville and Cumberland County.

The day marks the kick-off for the annual fundraising effort of the Methodist College Foundation, a group of Fayetteville businessmen who are committed to keeping the community's original pledge to support the college yearly in the amount of at least $120,000.

A Kick-Off Breakfast is planned for 8 o'clock in the morning in the Alumni Dining Rooms on the Methodist College campus. Approximately 150 members of the Developmental Team will gather Thursday morning, February 18, before devoting their entire day to soliciting financial contributions to Methodist College from local businesses.

Methodist College Foundation president Stacy Weaver, Jr. has announced the theme of the 1982 campaign "Thanks, Fayetteville--Thank You For Being A Friend."

Methodist College Foundation president Stacy Weaver, Jr. has announced the theme of the 1982 campaign "Thanks, Fayetteville--Thank You For Being A Friend."

"As the college celebrates its twenty-fifth birthday, it is appropriate to share that celebration with all the people who contributed to those 25 years of growth and success," says Weaver.

The Foundation raised over $200,000 for Methodist College in 1981 and campaign chairman Louis Spilman hopes to exceed that figure considerably.

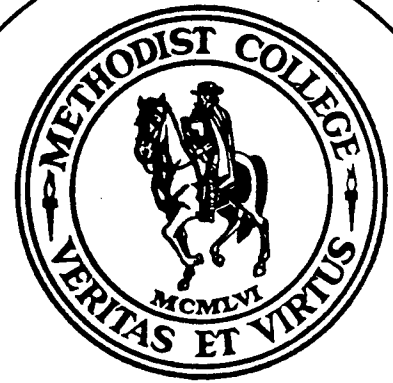

"The Fayetteville community's original pledge of $120,000 yearly to Methodist College is outdated, particularly

METHODIST COLLEGE CHORUS TO PERFORM IN CONCERT

FAYETTEVILLE--On _____, _____, 1982, the Methodist Chorus of Fayetteville, NC, will present a concert of sacred music at _____. Under the direction of Alan M. Porter, Associate Professor of Music at Methodist College, the Chorus is on their seventeenth tour.

Well known for its high quality music and spirited rendition of a variety of musical styles, the Methodist College Chorus has sung regularly for churches, civic clubs, military installations, conferences and rallies in eastern North Carolina. Recent tours have taken them as far north as Manchester, CN, and as far south as Orlando, FL.

The Methodist College Chorus features a select group of nineteen students from North Carolina, Georgia, Hawaii and a married couple from the Virgin Islands. These students are chosen by audition for their personality, moral character, and leadership qualities, as well as for their musical talents. Fifteen of the nineteen members are music majors while the remaining four members are concentrating in one of the eighteen other major fields offered by the college.

'I MADE THE RIGHT DECISION'

COLLEGE SOPHOMORE

FAYETTEVILLE--Kenny Hall of Dublin, North Carolina, lounges in the Methodist College Student Union with a down vest and an armload of textbooks--the two sure signs of a college student. A 6'4" Kenny fits right in with the 18-22 year-olds who are classmates of his at Methodist--only by reputation do you know that he is a 17 year-old sophomore who skipped his senior year at Tar Heel School and CLEP'ed out of 32 hours of college credit by exam.

"My father really started talking about getting a head start on my college education when I was a freshman in high school," says Kenny. "After my sophomore year and the summer preceding my junior year at Tar Heel, he really got serious about it."

Working for an eventual degree in law, Kenny felt that skipping his senior year in high school would be a smart move both professionally and economically. Instead of beginning a seven-year trek toward that law degree, he could cut it down to six. Little did he know that, through his performance on the CLEP exam, he would cut still another year off by receiving 32 credit hours.

"Now I'm looking at five years instead of seven," figures Kenny. "Was it a smart move? You can bet on it."

Having completed his first semester of college work, Kenny is even more confident of his decision to give up that "wonderful senior year" to be a freshman all over again. But the decision didn't come without some reservations.

"I knew that I was leaving my friends a year before I had to, and that hurt a little," confided Hall. "There was also that one more year of preparedness that I was passing up."

"Besides, I knew that I would be the youngest person on campus and I sometimes worried about being accepted as part of the campus."

Those worries proved unsubstantial. Hall finished his first semester with a 3.625 GPA, pulling B's in only religion and math. Accepted? Hall is a sports writer for the campus newspaper sMall Talk, an SGA senator, vice-chairperson for the State Student Legislature delegation from Methodist, a rushee for Lambda Chi Alpha and an active participant in men's intramurals. After the initial announcement of his academic achievement in opening convocation, Methodist students have shown no intimidation about Hall's youth.

"Sometimes, right at first, I would come out of a class or an exam at Methodist and ask myself "What am I doing here?," admits Hall. "Now I find myself asking the same question when I am at home visiting my old high school."

Despite his notable achievement in academics, Hall classifies himself as a "sleeper" in high school--he was #2 in class rank at Tar Heel and scored just under 1000 on the SAT's.

"A lot of people were surprised that I did as well as I did--but not my dad. He always believed that I could do it-it makes me feel good that he was right."

The deciding factors in Hall's decision to enter Methodist this year was, first, his exceptional performance on the CLEP exam which earned him 32 semester hours and, second, his selection as the Blackburn Scholarship winner from the United Methodist Church, North Carolina Conference.

"I probably wouldn't have come a year early if I hadn't earned any credit on the CLEP," says Kenny who didn't learn of his last eight hours of CLEP credit in French until opening convocation announcements.

Another determining factor was the steady support of Hall's high school French teacher, Brenda Hester Tolar. Ms. Tolar, a 1973 graduate of Methodist College, encouraged Kenny to be thankful for his talents and to use them. She also awarded him her Alumni Greatest Gift Scholarship.

Hall is grateful that those first few weeks on campus are over.

"I felt like I was in limbo at first," he remembers. "I didn't belong here completely and I didn't belong there any more. Now, although I do complain some like all college students, I really like it at Methodist. I couldn't have made a better decision than to come here when I did."

Kenny studies three hours a day unless there is a test coming up, then it is time to study until he knows it comfortably. Ironically, English 201 was both the most difficult course he had last semester and the most enjoyable.

"Dr. Preslar's English lit course was so tough," reflects Hall, "but, honestly, I enjoyed that course more than any other I took."

Did he miss anything by skipping ahead--are there any regrets?

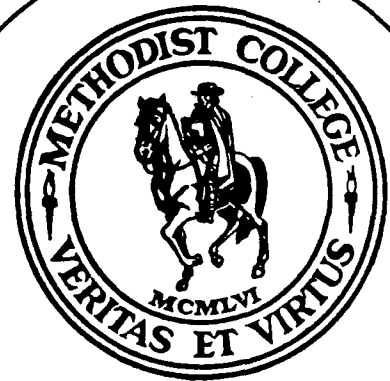

"Yes, there is one," Kenny admits with a smile. "I gave up the chance of winning any awards that are traditionally reserved for seniors. I guess that is not a major thing, but my walls are really empty--no plaques, no trophies, no medallions. Lots of certificates--but not one plaque. Maybe if I had stayed, I could

Methodist College is one of 38 independent colleges and universities honored this week by Governor Jim Hunt's proclamation that February 7-13 is Independent Higher Education Week in North Carolina.

In his declaration, Hunt cites strong economic contributions of the independent colleges including the $400 million expended yearly and the 12,000 North Carolinians salaried by these institutions.

Buildings and facilities of the 38 colleges and universities in the independent system are valued at more than $2 billion and they house over 50,000 students.

Every year independent colleges and universities in North Carolina confer nearly one-third of the bachelor's degrees, over one-half of the medical degrees, and nearly two-thirds of the law degrees earned in the state.

According to Governor Hunt, independent higher education in North Carolina is an "invaluable resource."

This is Gwen Sykes reporting from Methodist College.

METHODIST COLLEGE JOINS GOVERNOR'S CELEBRATION OF INDEPENDENT HIGHER EDUCATION WEEK

FAYETTEVILLE--Methodist College is one of 38 independent colleges and universities honored this week by Governor James B. Hunt's proclamation of February 7-13 as Independent Higher Education Week in North Carolina.

Hunt cites strong economic contributions in his declaration including the $400 million expended yearly by the independent colleges and the employment figure of 12,000 North Carolinians salaried by these institutions.

Buildings and facilities of the 38 colleges and universities in the independent system are valued at more than $2 billion. These buildings house over 50,000 students, many of whom come to North Carolina from other states to pursue their studies.

In the 190 years of independent colleges in North Carolina, Governor Hunt says "these institutions have been known for their pioneering educational spirit, high academic standards, and instruction which shows concern for values and individuals." There are currently over 200,000 alumni of independent institutions living in North Carolina.

METHODIST COLLEGE RESPONDS
TO CUT IN SOCIAL SECURITY
EDUCATIONAL BENEFITS

FAYETTEVILLE--In the wake of announced cuts in the educational benefits of children of disabled or deceased parents by the Social Security Administration, Methodist College has announced plans to assist in enrollment of current high school students prior to the May 1 cutoff dates.

According to Financial Aid Officer Donna Coons, the cuts are going to hurt especially bad in light of the cuts in federal financial aid to students that will be in effect for the 1982-83 academic year.

"The students are unfortunately being cut doubly--having just learned of the cutoff of Social Security benefits, they might well have sought to qualify for federal aid programs," says Ms. Coons.

"But those programs have also been cut and the amount of aid available is limited."

The trick, according to Ms. Coons, is to apply early for financial aid. As soon as the parent's 1981 income tax return is completed, the student should begin

"The students are unfortunately being cut doubly--having just learned of the cutoff of Social Security benefits, they might well have sought to qualify for federal aid programs," says Ms. Coons. "But those programs have also been cut and the amount of aid available is limited."

The trick, according to Ms. Coons, is to apply early for financial aid. As soon as the parent's 1981 income tax return is completed, the student should begin application for financial aid. That has always been the best way to insure that a student get the aid to which he is entitled, says Ms. Coons, but now the timing is essential.

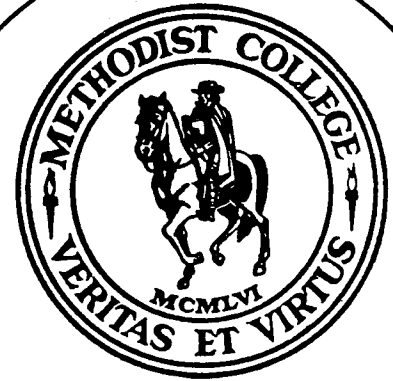

The Social Security Administration has come under considerable criticism for the lack of publicity about the cutting of student benefits effective May 1. Those students who are affected include those in the 18-22 age bracket who are the children of retired, disabled or deceased parents. These students must be enrolled in a full-time situation at a college, university, trade school or vocational school before May 1 or they will lose the $259 average monthly payment.

Director of Admissions at Methodist College Tommy Dent is creating a program for these students who will be attempting to complete the last month of high school while simultaneously carrying 12 semester hours of college credit. Dr. Fred Clark, academic dean at Methodist, will announce the details of the program within the week.

Current college students who are receiving Social Security benefits will find two changes in the cuts that will affect them directly. Benefits to them will be cut 25 percent as of May 1 and there will be no payment of benefits during the summer months. Prior to the congressional changes in the Social Security Act last August, students received checks monthly throughout the calendar year.

Further information and explanation is available from Ms. Coons or Tommy Dent at Methodist College.

METHODIST MEETS AVERETT ON LAST HOME GAME

FAYETTEVILLE- Senior Ricky Emerson plays his last game on the Monarch court this Saturday night when Methodist College hosts the Cougars of conference rival Averett College of Danville, VA.

Emerson, guard from Dry Fork, VA, has played four years for the Monarch team and is best known for his clutch free throws and outside shots at the buzzer.

Teammates on the Methodist team hope to give Emerson a victory to finish his Methodist career while trying to salvage what is left of the disappointing 1981-82 season.

The Monarchs are currently 2-19 after a heart-breaking 78-76 loss to Greensboro College in triple overtime and a devastating 106-65 loss to the NCAA Division III leader St. Andrews.

As the season races toward the DIAC Conference tournament in Norfolk, VA on February 24-26, Methodist has recorded losses to five conference schools in the last five outings.

The DIAC tournament will host the top four teams based on record and playoff games determined by end-of-season

METHODIST COLLEGE TO HOST
NC INDIVIDUAL COLLEGIATE GOLF TOURNEY

FAYETTEVILLE-Ian Joyce, Methodist College senior from Pittsburgh, PA, defends his title as North Carolina Individual Collegiate Champion when Methodist college hosts the second Annual North Carolina Collegiate Individual Golf Championship at Cypress Lakes Golf Course on Saturday, February 20.

Joyce won the event last year over a field of 76 entrants from 16 colleges and universities across the state.

Methodist College golf coach Gene Clayton has increased the field of entrants to 86 this year to insure the quality of competition. The tournament is the only one in the state of North Carolina which determines the best individual collegiate golfer in the state.

The tournament is based on individual scores tallied during the one-day tournament. A total of 10 awards will be given to the top ten medalists and the schools they represent. The tournament is an individual tournament, sponsored by Methodist College, and not a part of the NCAA spring golf program. The NCAA provides no basis for state individual championships.

METHODIST COLLEGE: ONE OF THE GOOD THINGS IN FAYETTEVILLE

Some 25 years ago, North Carolina United Methodists chose Fayetteville and Cumberland County as the home of the brand new college they envisioned as serving eastern N. C. There were a number of sites available and a number of cities lobbying for that distinction, but Fayetteville was chosen.

Methodist College students come to Fayetteville from over 17 states and 14 foreign countries. In addition, almost 60% of Methodist College students come from Fayetteville and Cumberland County. Fayetteville is home to both groups. They are not just takers of all the best that Fayetteville has to give; the college community makes every effort to give back to the community the best of their talents and academic offerings.

That's the reason you will not find a charge to attend Methodist College functions--not the art exhibits of senior art majors, not the presentation of King David with Metropolitan Opera soloist Michael Best, not the theatre productions that play continuously to capacity crowds, nor conference champion baseball games. Dr. Richard W. Pearce, president of Methodist College, has instilled in all members of the college community a respect for and responsi-

Dr. Richard W. Pearce, president of Methodist College, has instilled in all members of the college community a respect for and responsibility to the Fayetteville community. He believes honestly that Ramsey Street is a two-way street, providing the people of Fayetteville with the best of many worlds.

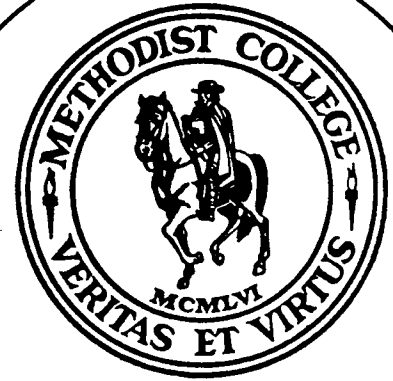

Methodist College gives to the Fayetteville Community not only in cultural offerings. The college is also a very real economic asset to the Cumberland County region, putting over $2.2 million annually in salaries, expenditures, etc., into the local economy. Current economic projection states that money spent in a community of our size and industrial index will be spent three times before it leaves this area. The result of this projection shows that Methodist College generates in reality $6.8 million to the fluid economy of Cumberland County in a given year. Although it is not an industrial complex nor a corporate entity, the economic contribution Methodist College makes to the stability of the Fayetteville fiscal outlook is substantial.

The college brings over 3,000 visitors to Fayetteville each year for productions at Reeves, numerous conferences held during the summer months on the college campus like the East-West Foundation, summer camps, speakers brought in on economic projections for the upcoming year, celebration worship experiences such as the Moravian Love Feast, and through the invitation of numerous noted speakers for campus seminars. The college seeks to be a source of pride in Fayetteville, taking every opportunity to bring visitors here.

Methodist College is supported by the members of the Fayetteville community, members of the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church and by gifts of alumni and friends. They are committed to being good stewards of the generous funds given, and cost-efficiency is a top priority in all phases of college life.

From the installing of low-energy lighting in Davis Memorial Library and the gymnasium, to the personal effort for energy conservation by students and faculty who conscientiously cut out lights and reduce use of unnecessary appliances, efficiency is the aim.

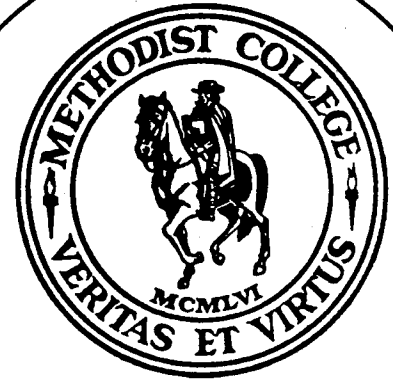

What's good about Fayetteville many things. But no list is complete without Methodist College. Methodist College exists for wholeness--in programs and in people. Faculty, students, administration tion and staff resemble a circle. Purpose and friendship connect; enthusiasm moves.

Where does it come from--this purpose, this friendship, this enthusiasm?

Not from a long past because Methodist College is only 25 years old. Not from claims of "biggest" or "best" or "first in everything" or "always excellent" or any of the other superlatives that schools use but fail to support. But from will.

It is the will of people who believe in Methodist College that makes the difference in enthusiasm.

It is the good will of the Fayetteville community that makes the difference in friendship from other cities where "town and gown" disputes are frequent.

It is the strong will of all who have shaped and continue to shape Methodist College that makes a difference in part. Together they make Fayetteville the best place to be.

COACH'S WIFE IS PART OF THE TEAM

FAYETTEVILLE--There are as many kinds of coaches' wives as there are coaches. Some prefer to sit quietly on the sidelines; some choose to be in the heat of the action; some find specific ways to assist in the total effort of her husband's program.

Sue Miller falls into the latter two categories, but her versatility defies most categorization. Besides the obvious task of keeping the home fires burning while husband Joe Miller is on the road--playing the Methodist schedule, recruiting players for next year's team, or scouting for the next Monarch game--Sue Miller has herself become an instrumental part of the basketball program at Methodist.

Most recently, Sue designed and made the DIAC conference banners that now hang in the gymnasium. The eight banners, measuring 46" x 72" are felt representations of each member school of the Dixie Conference done in their respective colors with appliqued name in contrasting color.

"I had seen the banners done in other colleges," said Sue Miller. "and I thought they added a nice touch. After the gym

"I had seen the banners done in other colleges," said Sue Miller, "and I thought they added a nice touch. After the gym at Methodist was painted this summer, I decided they would really look impressive here."

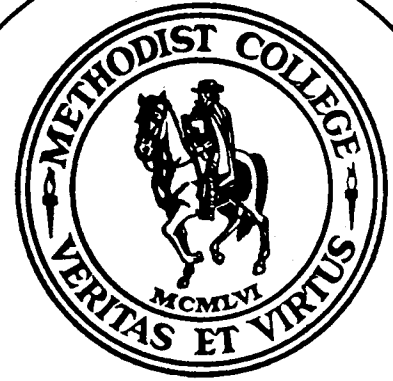

Athletic Director Gene Clayton provided the money for material from the Intramurals Class account, and Ms. Miller went to work putting in as many as five hours per banner for a total of approximately 40 hours of work before completion.

"The letters took as long as the banner itself," Ms. Miller laughed. "We have to have teams in the conference with names like Christopher-Newport and Virginia Wesleyan."

Banners, however, are the least of Sue Miller's contributions to the athletic program. In addition to driving the van for the cheerleaders on road games, she also keeps official statistics for Coach Miller. Compiling those stats takes about an hour after each game over and beyond the actual game time recording of scores, attempts, rebounds, free throws, etc.

A typical day for the Miller family when Methodist plays ball is understandably hectic. As a guidance counselor at Warrenwood Elementary School, Ms. Miller finishes her professional day at 3:30-- often just in time to pick up sons Andy or Patrick from band practice or orthodontist appointment.

"I don't see Joe from breakfast until game time," says Ms. Miller. "It's often 10 or 11 o'clock before we have a chance to say more than hello."

Sue Miller is realistic about the rigors of being a coach's wife. She likes least the long hours Coach Miller works when recruiting and scouting.

Most of all, Ms. Miller finds the people associated with the program the best part of the coach's life.

"I really enjoy the players and parents we have known through

METHODIST COLLEGE TO SPONSOR STUDY TOUR TO FRENCH CANADA

FAYETTEVILLE--Methodist College will sponsor a study tour to French Canada during Term I of the college's summer school, May 11-19.

Elaine Porter, associate professor of French at Methodist, will direct the tour to the key cities of Montreal and Quebec City.

Members of the tour will travel by Amtrak round-trip from Fayetteville. A six-hour layover in Washington, DC will afford opportunity for visits to the Smithsonian Institute.

Plans include spending three and one-half days each in Montreal and Quebec City. Among the selected tour sites in Montreal are the facilities of Radio Canada, an art museum, a planetarium and an athletic event.

Guided tours in Quebec City offer a look at the city, the Fort of la Citadella, Laval University, and numerous cultural events. A side trip by bus to the shrine of Sainte Anne de Beaupré and Montmorency Falls is also scheduled from Quebec City.

Total cost for the six-day tour is $450. Not included in this price are most lunches, food on Amtrak, unscheduled activities and personal purchases. A reservation fee of $100 is needed by

NEW TALENT HEADLINES

COLLEGE CONCERT SERIES

FAYETTEVILLE--"Dynamite entertainers" have been selected to open the 1982 Methodist College Student Union Board concert series, according to Dean of Students Calvert Ray.

Elaine Silver opens the season with a concert on Tuesday night, February 23 at 8 o'clock in Reeves Auditorium. Silver is a folksinger of considerable reputation on the college circuit.

Silver's critically acclaimed lyric soprano voice and wideranging repertoire have made her a popular attraction at many college campuses and coffeehouses.

The headline performer of the 1982 series is singer/songwriter Helen Hudson who will perform in concert in the Student Union on Wednesday night, March 10 at 8 o'clock.

Australian born and American-bred, Hudson has travelled extensively in the states. Since her entry into the music business just a few years ago, Helen has shared stages with John Davidson, Don McLean, Michael Murphy, Kenny Rankin, John Stewart, Livingston Taylor, B. J. Thomas, and Jesse Winchester.

VARIETY says she "writes like vintage Kristofferson and her consistant song festival wins prove it." Lucille Ball has said of her, "Helen is one of the most energetic, inspired young entertainers I have ever had the pleasure of working with."

Hudson will appear at Methodist as part of her spring college tour.
