METHODIST TO OFFER SUMMER LANGUAGE INSTITUTE

FAYETTEVILLE, NC--Methodist College will launch a program this summer to train and certify elementary school teachers interested in teaching a second language in the primary grades.

Under North Carolina's new Basic Education Program, instruction in a second language must be offered to every child in grades K-12 beginning this fall.

Mrs. Elaine Porter, Associate Professor of French at Methodist and a member of a state committee developing the "second language" program and teacher certification standards, said oral language skills will be taught in grades K-3. "When students reach the fourth grade, they will begin learning to read and write a second language," she added.

To assist teachers and school units in implementing the program, Methodist will offer a Summer Language Institute June 21-Aug. 18. Designed for elementary teachers with previous coursework in French or Spanish, the eight-week institute will offer courses in methodology, conversation, and practice teaching worth a total of 10 semester hours.

A laboratory school for children ages five-eight will be offered July 21-Aug. 18, giving teachers at the institute the opportunity to teach French or Spanish to primary grade pupils. The four major courses at the institute will be taught by Mrs. Elaine Porter (French) and Dr. Arnal Guzman (Spanish) of Methodist College, Dr. David Diaz (Spanish) of Fayetteville State University, and Mr. Fred Epeley (French and Spanish), a language specialist with the Burke County schools. In addition, Steve Hauge and 15 other guest educators will present topics of special interest.

Mrs. Porter said Cumberland County and several other school units in Region IV will pay the tuition for their teachers to attend the institute. She said Cumberland County will need 40 trained teachers by 1992 to fully implement the "second language" program in grades K-5. The state as a whole will require 3,000 foreign language specialists during the next four years.

Mrs. Porter said the idea for a summer language institute originated with Steve Hauge, BEP Coordinator for Region IV, who asked her if Methodist would be interested in offering the training. The college agreed and the N. C. Dept. of Public Instruction offered grant funds for curriculum design and teaching materials. "This is a wonderful opportunity for us," said Mrs. Porter. "School systems all over North Carolina are looking for trained second language teachers."

Cumberland County school officials indicate they will hire eight "second language" resource teachers for the kindergarten grades this fall. Local kindergarteners will receive 15-20 minutes of conversational instruction in either French or Spanish three times a week. During the next five years, second language instruction will be added in grades 1-5.

Mrs. Porter said second language specialists will reinforce what is already being taught in English at each grade level. For example, kindergarteners will be taught the French or Spanish names for colors, numbers, and articles of clothing.

The director of Methodist's first Summer Language Institute is most excited about the institute's laboratory school (July 21-Aug.18), which will offer French and Spanish to kindergarteners and first graders. Parents interested in enrolling their children for 20 one-hour sessions should contact Mrs. Porter at the college, phone 488-7110, Ext. 277.

WIGGS NAMED ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

FAYETTEVILLE, NC -- Fayetteville native Rita Sue Wiggs will become assistant director of athletics at Methodist College, effective Aug. 18.

Ms. Wiggs joined the Methodist faculty and coaching staff two years ago. She currently serves as acting chair of the physical education department, sports information director, and women's basketball coach.

"We've been very impressed with her dedication, organization, and administrative skills," said College President Elton Hendricks. "Rita does an outstanding job with any task she's given," added Athletic Director Tom Austin.

Austin said his new assistant will continue to serve as sports information director, women's basketball coach, and assistant professor of physical education. She will assist Austin in directing the college's growing athletic program. As a member of NCAA Division III, Methodist currently offers 17 intercollegiate sports* and will add an 18th--football--in the fall of 1989.

Ms. Wiggs earned her B.S. degree in physical education at UNC-Greensboro and her M.S. in education at N.C. State University. Before coming to Methodist, she was employed as assistant women's basketball coach at N.C. State and as head women's basketball coach at Roane State Community College in Tennessee. She is a graduate of Cape Fear High School, where she was an outstanding basketball player.
