small ALK

THE STUDENT VOICE OF METHODIST UNIVERSITY

RANKER AND ORSE

Caper Caper Caper Caper Caper

OCT 27, 2008

THIS ISSUE

Volume 48 Issue 5

Trainers get personal in Nimmocks Center

Deanna Piacente Staff Writer

Personal trainers are infamously expensive. College students are infamously broke. The gym memberships run at about 30 to 50 dollars a month, and most do not even include individual training. Since last fall, Methodist University students, faculty and staff have had a free facility to exercise, leading to an overall healthier campus.

Now two student interns for the Athletic Training Program are volunteering at the Nimmocks Fitness Center. According to Kenny Tien, Assistant Director for CRIMP (Campus Recreation & Intramural Programs), the trainers, Shantell Dustin and Christina Layson, "have good knowledge of health and fitness and [CRIMP] just provides the place for them to assist students, faculty and staff."

The trainers will help develop individual fitness programs to meet goals, teach others how to properly use equipment, spot for heavy lifting, improve technique/form and provide a body fat composition analysis for all who are interested. The services are free of charge and open to anyone with a Methodist University ID Card. An appointment is not required, but suggested. All available hours are on a first come, first serve basis. For all the health food nuts, Tien says a nutritionist "just isn't in our budget."

Be sure to keep an eye out for the trainers at the Nimmocks on Monday and Tuesday from noon to 6 p.m. and on Wednesday and Friday from noon to 3 p.m.

To schedule an appointment call the Nimmocks Fitness Center at 910-630-7161.

Left to right, Harvey T. Wright II (Chair of the MU Board of Trustees), Bob Etheridge and President Elton Hendricks hold the oversized check. Photo by Roxana Ross

Matthew Dempster Contributing Writer

United States Representative Bob Etheridge presented a check of $397,503 in federal funds for the development of the Methamphetamine Education Training Program on Monday, Oct. 20.

Etheridge joined Methodist University and President Elton Hendricks and the Board of Trustees to award the check. About one year ago the Environmental and Occupational Management program began research and completed the federal grant application.

With Bob Etheridge and the support from Representative Mike McIntyre and Senators Elizabeth Dole and Richard Burr, they requested and secured the funding in the FY 2008 U.S Department of Justice Appropriations bill for its Community Oriented Policing Services' Methamphetamine Initiative. The university is interdisciplinary and will directly impact social work, justice studies, chemistry, and environmental and occupational management majors. Douglas Smith, sophoа more in the Environmental and Occupational Management Major, said, "I am happy that all of our hard work as ENM majors came together and got the job done. We worked so hard to get this grant passed and I just want to thank all the Senators and Etheridge for helping us achieve our goal to further fund our education."

Enivormental Program recieves federal grant

The funding will give the majors the ability to purchase specialized forensic lab equipment and develop unique software for use in a combination of classroom, forensic science laboratory, and virtual simulation training.

Etheridge had this to say, "This funding will help to respond to the Methamphetamine epidemic that has plagued North Carolina communities, keeping our communities safe for our families to live, work, and play. These funds will not only expand Methodist University's leadership forensic science, but help our first responders fight the blight of meth-related crime through training in advanced crime-fighting technology and methamphetamine lab cleanup.

smallTALK staff

Editor-in-Chief Ashley Genova

News Editor Ashley Young

Sports Editor Danielle Levine

Web Editor Matt Beitzel

Graphic Editor Taylor Blackley

Staff Writers Austin Bordeaux Aryn Hicks Deanna Piacente Alicia Secord Lakeisha Story

Ad Managers Thomas Holmes Douglas Wade smallTALK is the student-run newspaper of Methodist University. It is published every other week throughout the school year. The newspaper is editorially independent of Methodist University, and any ideas and opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect the views and opinions of the faculty, staff and administration of Methodist University. smallTALK welcomes letters to the editor. All letters should be delivered to the Student Media office on the first floor of Bern's Student Center or sent via e-mail to ashgenova@yahoo.com. Story suggestions should be sent to the same address.

Students are free to join smallTALK at any point in the school year. Meetings are every Monday at 4:30 p.m. in the Cape Fear Commons Community Building.

Initial copies of smallTALK are free. Additional copies are 25 cents.

Methodist radio station set to stream

Alicia Secord Staff Writer

When Sarah Crist joined the Methodist faculty in 2006, it was with the intention of beginning a radio station to the school. The station is finally getting off the ground. An interest meeting was held last

An interest meeting was held last Tues to outline the planned structure of the station and to allow interested students to sign up for positions on the staff. The station will be run by student directors who will report to Crist. These directors will organize the radio staff in the various departments: programming, music selection, news, sports, promotions, production, and web design. Crist will be interviewing students for director positions over the next few weeks. The students selected for these positions will receive course credits or work study.

"I think the station is a great idea," said Jessica Pridgem, a freshman elementary education major. "I'd like to participate in the music department or on the air."

The station will be webcasted from the Trustees Building room 391. The room is soundproofed with carpet on the walls, much like that seen in major radio stations. Due to low funding, the station has less equipment and space than the staff would like. However, according to Crist, the communications department is working to find a more suitable space for the station to work in. Listeners can find the station at www.muradio.org, but until the staff is trained, the station will run a continuous loop of music.

Though the station will predominantly play college and modern rock, Crist said, "Students will have the freedom to do specialty shows like sportscasts and featuring other genres of music."

Crist chose to broadcast the station over the web for several reasons. FM radio broadcasting requires very expensive equipment and the Fayetteville airwaves are currently very full. Also, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) places strict requirements on AM stations, which are difficult to meet as a start-up college station. Though the FCC does not monitor web-based radio, Crist will be listening to the broadcast to ensure that there is no profanity or inappropriate topics on the air.

"Radio can be a great work experience," said Christ. "I want it to be fun for everyone, but it needs to be within appropriate limits."

Even students not interested in participating seem excited.

"It's something fresh," said junior Horace Hemley. "I think it will generate some positive publicity for MU."

Anyone interested in joining the radio staff or applying for a director position should contact Crist as soon as possible at scrist@methodist.edu. Training of staff will begin in about two weeks.

Young Democrats attract attention on campus Arvn Hicks

Staff Writer

With Presidential elections right around the corner, one politically charged organization made itself known in the halls of Methodist University. The Young Democrats Club began their political activism in early September, working to promote voter registration, as well as to endorse Democratic nominees. The Young Democrats represent more than a partisan organization on campus; they represent well-educated youth who care about the future of our nation.

One cannot help but to notice a table laden with posters supporting change for the future. The table run by the Young Democrats was put in place in early September. Members of the club not only support presidential nominee Barack Obama, but promoted Democratic nominees for governor, senate, congress, and other offices as well. The organization also set up an area where students could register to vote. The Young Democrats registered over 100 students, and set up information on how to receive absentee ballots. The registration was open to voters of all political affiliations. The goal was not to sway students to vote Democrat, the group simply wanted people to get out and vote.

Chris "C.O." Oden, a junior, believes that it is important to vote because "[it gives you] the say so. If you don't vote, you have no right to complain about the outcome whether your candidate wins or loses."

The Young Democrats have campaigned for this year's Democratic nominees on campus, but have also become involved by volunteering in the Fayetteville area. Members of the group have taken part in door-to-door registration, phone campaigns, and Democratic Convention volunteer projects. The association wants to make itself and its purpose known to the Fayetteville area, in addition to the Methodist campus.

Many students join the organization to make their opinions known and to interact with students who share common political interest. The small, yet powerful, organization resembles a diverse, close-knit family who respects opposing views and reacts accordingly. Man or woman, black or white, religious or atheist - the Young Democrats do not discriminate against anyone who has a desire to become politically active. The club also refuses to allow itself to fall victim to intimidation. This determination was evident as many posters, bulletin boards, and marquees were vandalized throughout the past few months. One incident even involved a Methodist student screaming derogatory statements about Barack Obama, such as "Down with Obama Bin Laden" and "Obama Hussein loves Sadam Hussein." Individuals often come past the table with statements calling the organization ignorant and tactless.

President Taron Stubbs, a business administration major, feels that those who attempt to intimidate the club and call Democrats ignorant "take advantage of the freedom of speech. Those who make such statements are the ignorant ones. Democrats are not ignorant, [we just] desire a change."

Now that voter registration has passed,

Yalita Rivers and Kenya Lewis manning the Young Democrats table in the Berns Student Center. Students could sign up to vote in the upcoming presidential election. Photo by Aryn Hicks the main purpose of the Young Democrats is to get Methodist students off campus to vote early, or vote in general. Because of gas prices and some students' lack of transportation, the Young Democrats are setting up transportation to early voting sites. They are encouraging students to vote, despite their political preference. They group fights to prove that the issues are more crucial to this election than any other aspect.

Shannon Alford, a senior business administration major, feels that education and the economy are linked together as the most important issues in this election for Methodist students.

To me, education is the most important due to the fact that I come from a middle class family, and I will be the first one in my immediate family to graduate from a university," said Alford. "Knowing the struggles my mom and dad have faced financially just to get me through college, education is very important to me. I want my children and grandchildren to have the same opportunity as me."

With the election right around the corner, the Young Democrats prove to be a powerful, politically charged organization. Their determination will surpass the election. The group will continue meeting after the elections, even if Obama is not elected into office. They will continue working to make the opinions and ideas of the Democratic Party known to the Methodist University community.

2008-2009 Young Democrat Club Officers

	-
President:	Taron Stubbs, Jr
V. President:	Hakeem Brown, So
Secretary:	Courtney Fernandez, So
Treasurer:	Ebony Wilder, Fr
Planners:	Shannon Alford, Sr
	Andre Harris, So
Advisor:	Melissa Hayes

Nov 5 7:30-9:00 Berns Students/Kids under 12: $3

Guest/Faculty: $5 Club Members: Free

Dedeaux's Java Shop

Coffee House & Internet Cafe

4808 Ramsey Street Ste. 102 Fayetteville, NC 28311 (Across from Pizza Hut)

910-482-8518

Bring in this ad and receive a 10% Discount!

Vote- but know the facts

Matt Beitzel Web Editor/ Contributing Writer

On the brink of the Nov. 4 election day the presidential campaigns are the talk of the town. In light of this, I've distilled as much information from both campaigns as possible using third-party resources. The hot topics of energy, Iraq, military service and healthcare are all listed below.

-ENERGY-

Both candidates tend to ride the fence and use plenty of buzz words such as "alternative" and "renewable." Both John McCain and Barack Obama propose investment into alternative energy, with the Obama campaign the spending with a promised $150 billion in taxpayer funding. According to his campaign website, he'd invest heavily in solar, wind, and geothermal power, to a level that in 2025 will account for 25 percent of the nation's power generation. Currently these technologies get almost zero funding and zero integration from the private sector, because they're too new, inefficient, or aren't commercially viable. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, all three combined accounted for only 0.5 percent of power usage in 2007, which includes power for homes, businesses and transportation. Ignoring inflation, that's a 4900 percent increase, and due to construction provides a full 5-10 years before we see any benefit at all, and 17 years before we see the bulk of its benefit - leaving only a $1,000 tax cut for energy from the Obama camp to fill the gap.

One omission from the Obama plan that is included in the McCain plan is investment in natural gas. According to the U.S. DoE, natural gas accounts for almost 24 percent of the nation's power usage, making it a viable alternative for expanded use. It's also a commercially viable alternative to oil. Currently, natural gas is found in 23 states in the union, with the worlds' largest known reserve lying untapped just off the U.S. coastline containing nearly 77 trillion cubic feet of gas. Current technology is also ready for a natural gas conversion. Kits for almost every car can be purchased and installed for minimal cost in a matter of days, and home refueling kits are available for any structure with a natural gas connection. According to the American Council for an Energy-Efficient Economy, natural gas cars have been the most environmentally friendly alternatives for the last two years, bypassing clean diesels, hybrids, and even electric cars. Lastly, natural gas already has infrastructure. The pipes are in the ground, can supply cars, and the technology has already been proven. According to the Herald Tribune Salt Lake City, Utah has been fueling cars for a year for the price of 87 cents per gallon equivalent. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency also rates natural gas cars as releasing 20 percent less emissions than hybrid and conventional vehicles. Infrastructure, price, commercial viability, immediate application, environmentally friendly are completely ignored by Obama.

-IRAQ-

According to Obama's campaign website, he seeks to withdraw troops immediately. The site states, "Obama will give his Secretary of Defense and military commanders a new mission in Iraq: ending the war" by the summer of 2010. Obama calls for only a small strike force to remain on the ground, to "continue efforts to train and support the Iraqi security forces." McCain, however, wants to stay longer in Iraq. McCain's plan goes on to lead the Iraqi government to landmark establishment of investment in the Iraqi private sector. Once a banking and loan system that can aid small businesses is in place the U.S. will end all involvement.

Of these two plans, no one is sure how to proceed, not even the Iraqi people. Historically, the troop withdraw in 2006 failed, leading to a rise in violence. This was followed by a surge of troops in summer 2007 that, according to the McCain website, from June 2007 to March 2008 led to a reduction in genocidal violence by 90 percent, coalition deaths by 70 percent and civilian deaths by 70 percent.

-MILITARY SERVICE-

While Obama has not formally served in the military, he has falsified claims about the record of his grandfather. In 2002, during a speech to a group of Memorial Day supporters, he stated that the only family member to serve in the military was his grandfather. He said his grandfather, Stanley Armour Dunham, served with General George Patton and was part of the force to liberate Auschwitz. According to the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, this is not possible because it was the Soviet Red Army who liberated Auschwitz. Obama also claimed that Dunham joined the war effort the day after Pearl Harbor was bombed. According to World Net Daily, the largest, most viewed news outlet in the world according to Alexis ratings, requested Army records show Dunham joining the Army on June 18, 1942 - six months after Pearl Harbor. Lastly, in Obama's own autobiography, "Dreams of My Father," Obama stated "Gramps returned from the war never having seen real combat.'

McCain's' service record, however, is practically spotless. According to the Associated Press' Freedom of Information request to the Navy, McCain joined when he was 17. Over the next 23 years of service he received 17 military decorations including the Silver Star Medal, Legion of Merit with a combat "V" and one gold star, a Distinguished Flying Cross, and a Bronze Star Medal with a combat "V" and two gold stars. While serving on the USS Intrepid as a F4 Phantom pilot, McCain's plane was set ablaze by an errant rocket while still on the flight deck. After exiting his own burning craft, McCain went back into the blaze to save a friend when an explosion caused shrapnel and burn wounds. According to the McCain campaign website, it was at the end of his hospital stay that McCain volunteered for service aboard the carrier USS Oriskany.

While flying missions over North Vietnam McCain was shot down, and according to eyewitness accounts of broke both legs at impact and a broken shoulder from Vietnamese captors. Day states "He was in a huge body cast ... his right knee was mangled. His left arm was dislocated and hanging out of the socket. He had been bayoneted in the leg. He was bandaged up and was down to 95-97 pounds ... I was certain he was going to die before morning."

According to McCain in a video interview, once he was able to move he was put into a solitary cell, where he spent 5 years as a prisoner of war at the 'Hanoi Hilton,' refusing release to allow other captives freedom in his place.

Continued as "Vote" on page 11

Ashley Asks... Ashley Young News Editor Have you had the flu vaccination and what do you think of it?

"I haven't had one (a flu shot) since I've been here. I've been sick with random colds." —Trevor Finchum, freshman biology major.

"I had it and it caused me to get the flu. It's good for old people and babies but I don't think anyone else should take it."

–Ebony Wilder, a freshman social work major.

-"No. I fight it (the flu) naturally." -Rickey Lizotte, a sophomore, exercise science major.

" I take one (a flu shot) every year. I've never had any complications from them." –Koneil Ingram, sophomore social work major.

FOR ONE-STOP EARLY VOTING LOCATIONS NEAR YOU CALL 1-888-NC-EARLY (1-888-623-2759) OR VISIT

VOTEFORCHANGE.COM

OBAMA S BIDEN =

NEWS

Methodist University Pep Band at the Pep Rally. Photo by Nick Trowell

Volume 48. Issue 5

Volume 48. Issue 5

Family Weekend '08:

Monarch parents visit campus for annual weekend of entertainment

Alicia Secord Staff Writer and Ashlev Genova Editor-in-Chief

nual event when families of game. The other pre-game day, Oct. 17. current Monarchs are invit- option was a Spirit Lunch in weekend of family-oriented Monarchs lost to the Ferrun screen which displayed mu- sound was not top-notch. activities. This year's events Panthers 31-13. included a football game, a Sun. Oct. 17-19.

Parents began flooding the Later that night, the Bern's options for them to choose show was judged by the vis- Television. Drake explained sic going. from. They could hang out iting parents. in Chris's House, golf with Sunday, parents and their children, or take a tour students prepared for of the campus. Some decid- the visiting family's ed to attend the Pep Rally in departure. The Green Berns Student Center.

activities for families to do fast to send the famialone or with their children. lies off right. Parents Breakfast was served in left for home as their Chris's House, where par- children prepared to ents could speak to Meth- return to classes after odist faculty about life and the weekend. studies on campus. After that they were invited to join the Parents' Association and become a closer part of the Monarch community.

pecially the quarterback."

and Gold Café hosted Saturday was packed with a Bon Voyage Break-

BARRY DRAKE

Parents and students had sic videos with sound and to the early '90s.

that one of the first music "During the dark days of were just catchy beats, but heads. Even George Blanc, videos every played on the Disco, Bruce Springsteen eventually they grew into po- Dean of Students, lip-synced station had a touch of irony: seemed like rock and rolls' litical and social statements. Students and their families a blast from the musical the Buggles' "Video Killed only hope," said Drake. When rap music mixed with participated in the Monarch past with a Family Weekend the Radio Star." Music vid- Springsteen's style had a the gang cultures of Califor-Zone, which is held before event, Barry Drake's rock eos opened up the music in-very regional, New Jersey nia, rap grew into the style Family Weekend is an an- every Monarch football and roll of the '80s on Fri- dustry for a new kind of cre- feel, said Drake. Many oth- that is familiar today. ativity, in which bands with er artists also had a regional In 1989. Drake said that Drake's presentation in- unique images could break feel. ed to visit the campus for a the cafeteria. The Methodist cluded a large projector into the industry, even if their One such artist reminded lar, that true rock and roll

Despite the loss, Matt Vann, clips of artists discussing different styles of music, in- mousse and hairspray of hair like punk. Eventually, the talent show, and a presenta- a freshman PGM major, said, their works. Drake speech cluding New Wave, Heart- bands." This artist is Bon underground music became tion about 80's music. Fam- "My parents thought the chronicled the time period of land American Rock, Pop Jovi, who is still popular to- the mainstream. ily Weekend was held Fri- football team was great, es- rock music from the late '70s Music, Rap, and Hair Bands. day. He focused on a few of the Drake shared information mix of parents, students and Gay. "I was surprised to hear The biggest change for more well-known artists about the origin of rap mu-staff. They enthusiastically the history of so many of my campus on Friday for reg- was the site of a student and music in that time was the from each genre who kept sic, which he said grew out applauded and cheered for favorite songs." istration. There were many faculty talent show. The creation of MTV, or Music the style of rock and roll mu- of hip hop culture and Jamai- their favorite bands, sing-

On the Cover

Contestants in the talent show. Photo courtesy of the Student Activities Committee

NEWS

smallTALK +Oct. 13, 2008

Pictured is Barry Drake, speaker for the 80's Rock presentation. Photo by Roxana Ross

pop music became so popu-Drake of Springsteen. This fans turned to alternative, Drake talked about many artist "rose up from the underground styles of music, sic of the '90s

Drake's audience was a can music. At first, rap lyrics ing lyrics and bopping their

to Def Leppard's "Pour Some Sugar on Me."

Drake has already lectured at Methodist about the music of the '70s. Perhaps next year's Family Weekend will have a lecture about the mu-

funny and very knowledgeable," said freshman Jessica students alike. Staff and stu- $50 prize. dents showcased such talents for the best performances.

TALENT SHOW

"I thought the speaker was part was judging the talent show," said Bernard King, a junior computer science major. "They thought that was great.'

> The show was hosted by Career Service's Katrina Stanley Blue and sophomore, Andre Harris. They joked with one another and with the performers between acts.

The winner was the barber shop quintet, fre-QUINTcy, made up of Dustin Autry, Michael Martin, Nathan Bright, Brian Inghram, and Justin Klemballa. They "Moondance," sang by Van Morrison. As the winners, they were awarded $200, which they split. The second place act was Doris Jackson, whose juggling act earned Family Weekend's Satur- her a $100 prize. Mark Tarday night Talent Show was entino and Jessica Britt tied a must see for families and for third place. They split a

The talent show proved as singing, dancing and jug- to be an entertaining part gling. Three parents judged of Family Weekend, and the acts and awarded prizes showed the parents that the faculty and students not only "My parents' favorite work hard, but have fun too.

Pictured is Director of Career Services and Parent Programs Kim Genova, who put the Family Weekend program together. Photo by Staff.

Mega Man 9 is old school fun Crossword

Austin Bordeaux Staff Writer

For PS3, Xbox360, and Wii

My first impression of this game was an odd mixture of nostalgia and wonder. With all the current remakes and old school games being made lately this game is a welcome addition with its NES style graphics and game play. It's a revival to the series that no one thought would happen, but everyone knew we needed. This trip back to the glory days of the Mega Man series is amazing to say the least.

STORY: 4/10 The story is pretty basic and predictable. The ever-present villain Dr. Wily pretends to be done with his evil ways and blames all of his past mistakes on Dr Light. Dr Wilv was lying and is back to his old takeover-the-world-with-powerful-robots game. Dr. Wily kidnaps Dr. Light which spurs Mega Man into action to defeat Dr. Wily and his creations while attempting to rescue Dr. Light.

GAMEPLAY: 10/10 The game play is just like the old Mega Man 1-6 games. Jump, shoot, use specials, and climbing ladders are all a player has to worry about. The controls are accurate though and one will not notice a lag to jumping or shooting. Honestly if we didn't know any better we would think that it really did come out on the NES back in the day. That's exactly how much it plays like the beloved originals. The difficulty some might find to be way above their level of skill, but any game that presents a challenge nowadays has my support. To counter act some of the difficulty in the game, an upgrade purchase system was added in which you collect bolts and screws throughout the levels and use them as currency to buy such items as energy containers, extra lives, and so on from Roll and Rush.

GRAPHICS: 7/10 The graphics NES are quite hard to grade, because when considering graphics used in video games today, this games graphics are horrible. The thing is though Capcom intentionally made the graphics NESstyle. The graphics are actually slightly above NES quality. Everything looks pretty much the same as Mega Man 1-6 did. The same Mega Man sprite is used and the game has crisp, clean pixilated graphics.

SOUND: 10/10 Every stage has a catchy beat to it that never gets boring. Once you select the boss character stage to fight on the trademark "Boss Jingle" still plays like almost every past Mega Man game had. There is very little to not like about it OVERALL: 9/10 By and large, Mega Man 9 is a classic Mega Man game. If you've played any of the original NES Mega Man games, expect pretty much the same thing. This game is not for everybody. Its difficulty might dissuade players from trying the game and its graphics don't match up to anything currently being released. For Mega Man fans and even those who never played a Mega Man title I whole heartedly recommend this game. I can't speak highly enough for this game that has brought one of my favorite series back on the right track. Mega Man we're glad to have you back!

17

20

26

31

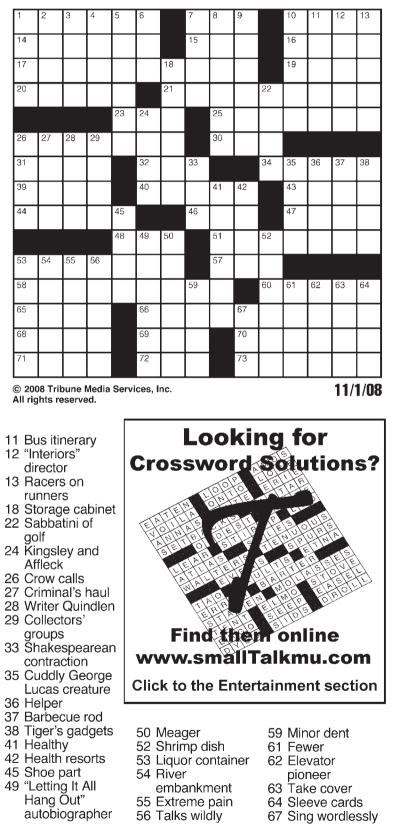

39

44

53

68

- 10 Time periods 14 Caribbean
- capital
- 15 Raw mineral
- 16 Defoe's Flanders
- 17 Blueblood 19 Army mascot
- 20 Absolutely not!
- 21 Deeply cut
- 23 Seller's $
- equivocation
- 25 Unties
- 26 Academic
- groups
- 30 Make a blunder 31 Top-drawer
- 32 Fish catcher
- 34 Leavening
- ingredient
- 39 Refuses to
- 40 Begins moving
- 43 Dry by rubbing
- 44 Cache of cash 46 Saturate
- 47 Garfield's pal 48 Hosp. sections
- 51 NBA scores
- 53 Erupt suddenly
- 57 Home of the
- Trojans 58 Yellow tablets
- 60 Wahine's
- welcome
- 65 Stratford's river
- 66 Art of counting 68 In the mail
- 69 Sailor's org.
- _-down cake 70
- 71 Marathon and Longboat
- 72 Journey part
- 73 Wide shots
- DOWN
- 1 Better late ____ never
- 2 Uncommon
- 3 Tel ____Jaffa
- 4 Bouquet holder
- 5 Lead-ins 6 Portuguese saint
- the Explorer"
- 8 Delphic seer
- 9 Shooting star 10 Goldman and
- Lazarus

Palin boosts 'SNL' audience and its cultural relevance

Verne Gay Newsday (MCT)

If not quite Richard Nixon's "sock it to me?" moment on "Laugh In" almost exactly 40 years ago, Sarah Palin's TV appearance on "Saturday Night Live" still proved two entirely separate but related and incontrovertible facts.

First: The lady from Wasilla has a sense of humor. Second: That little show over at 30 Rockefeller Plaza remains as vital a part of the cultural landscape as it did back in 1975. at birth.

An estimated 14 million viewers tuned in Saturday night, the biggest "SNL" audience since 1994, when Nancy Kerrigan and Aretha Franklin appeared. It was, in fact, one of the heftier audiences for any network program so far this fall.

Palin was on camera five minutes, if that, and had three, maybe four lines- including, of course, one of TV's most indelible "Live from New York" But what she said didn't really matter as much as what she did, which was to turn up

Believe it or not, there was some political risk for Palin. An "SNL" appearance, however innocuous, threw her into the arms of the East Coast liberal elite-those arch, cynical, Harvard-educated types who presumably sneer at Joe Sixpack and Joe the Plumber-Sarah's people. Moreover, "SNL" has bestowed upon Palin, just three weeks before D-Day, a little comic credibility and maybe even a few additional votes in the process.

Tina Fey, the other Sarah Palin, didn't even meet her twin during the show, or at least as far as viewers at home could tell. Did Fey keep her at arm's length because of her own political leanings? A topic, no doubt, for bloggers this week.

During an interview with WWOR's Brenda Blackmon on Sunday, Palin said of her appearance, "We need more of these days. When it is just fun, I would do it again." She also noted that she didn't attend the famous after-show party -a reminder that for both Palin and "SNL," this appearance was strictly business.

Left, Sarah Palin. Right, Tina Fey Photos courtesy of MCT Campus.

uarantine a mediocre remake Caution! Contains spoliers!)

Deanna Piacente Staff Writer

How does a mutant strand of rabies sound to liven up a date to the (Screen movies?

'Quarantine''

Gems 2008) is a horrifying tale of a single building in Los Angelos that has been plagued by a synthetic form of rabies that spreads within minutes and is transferred immediately through the mutual contact of any bodily fluids.

The film begins slowly, with seemingly never ending scenes of vomit-inducing flirting between Angela, a young shadowing an crew, and a reporter L.A.F.D. firehouse full of drooling men. Thankfully, though, as soon as Angela and the firefighters get "the call of their lives" the plot picks up speed and plunges straight into the gory, blood filled thriller the trailers promised it would be.

Between the psychotic and cannibalistic old lady and the disease-possessed "Quarantine" little girl, is sure to leave everyone with clenched fists and racing pulses. Of course the blood curdling screams and "Blair Witch" style cinematography may also leave them with a headache.

The cast of relatively unpopular actors may not be a magnet for potential viewers, but it wouldn't matter because everv character dies at the end anyway. The plot was definitely formatted for a sequel, leaving everyone scratching their heads and wondering where the naked monster in the attic actually came from. As for Angela...let's just say she permanently "signed off."

Above, the poster for the new movie, Quarantine. Right a poster for the original movie, REC.

The movie is a remake of an original film called "REC" which has better ratings and much less the interference from shaking and non-focused first person camera view. "REC" also did viewers the favor of explaining the most confusing parts of the final outcome, something "Ouarantine" failed miserably in doing.

My Rating: 5.7/10

All of the Restrurant ratings above are from North Carolina Public Health Inspections website. They are current from its website as of 10/24/08.

SPORTS

horts'

Basketball back in style:

Krzyzewski returns to Duke seeking another gold-medal performance

By Luciana Chavez McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

DURHAM, N.C. - Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski walked into his first news conference of the 2008-09 basketball season without a crown on his head or a team of bodyguards following in his wake.

Krzyzewski was changed by his experience coaching the U.S. basketball team to Olympic gold at the Beijing Olympics in August, but he isn't different.

Asked if he took a victory lap, at any point, to celebrate, Krzyzews-ki joked, "You saw me at 3 in the morning, didn't you? Moonwalking on the beach waving pompoms? In the cheerleader outfit?"

Krzyzewski immediately reconnected with his Duke team and the recruiting trail when he returned from China eight weeks ago.

Before he left for Olympic training in late July, his 2008-09 team came to his home the night before he left. When he returned to Durham, his Duke team was there that night to greet him. "We just got down to doing what we're supposed to be doing,' Krzyzewski said before opening Duke's first practice to the public last Friday, "not so much work as something exciting working with kids.

The last three weeks, Krzyzews-Above pictured is Duke Men's Basketki also was able to get away to re-ball Head Coach, Mike Krzyzewski. focus for the college season. Duke Picture courtesy of MCT Campus was 28-6 overall and 13-3 in the ACC while reaching the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

"Not so much to get away to rest, but to get away to get balance and give some thinking and creative time to what we're doing," he said

Krzyzewski and Jamie Spatola, his youngest daughter, are co-authoring a second book together, this time about Krzyzewski's Olympic experience. It's called "The Gold Standard."

"That's been good because we're talking about basketball and team-building," he said.

Krzyzewski's first priority getting off the plane from Beijing was to immerse himself back into the recruiting wars. Though it was possible that Krzyzewski and assistant head coaches Steve Wojciechowski and Chris Collins could have lost ground while in China and rookie assistant Nate James was handling things back in the U.S., they did not.

Nor did Duke get an Olympic bump in recruiting, Krzyzewski said.

Within the last three weeks, Duke did secure a 2009 commitment when Ryan Kelly chose Duke last week and 2010 commitments from Tyler Thornton and Josh Hairston. Mason Plumlee, a 2009 recruit and brother to current Blue Devils freshman Miles Plumlee, chose Duke earlier this year.

Some people looked superficially at it and said we got commitments right after the Olympics, and 'Boy, it really resonated,' " Krzyzewski said. "My feeling is we would have gotten those kids anyway and not because of the Olympics. Now that may help in the future."

Krzyzewski looked for ways that the Olympic experience would enrich his Duke coaching, even while his attention was diverted from one or the other the past three years.

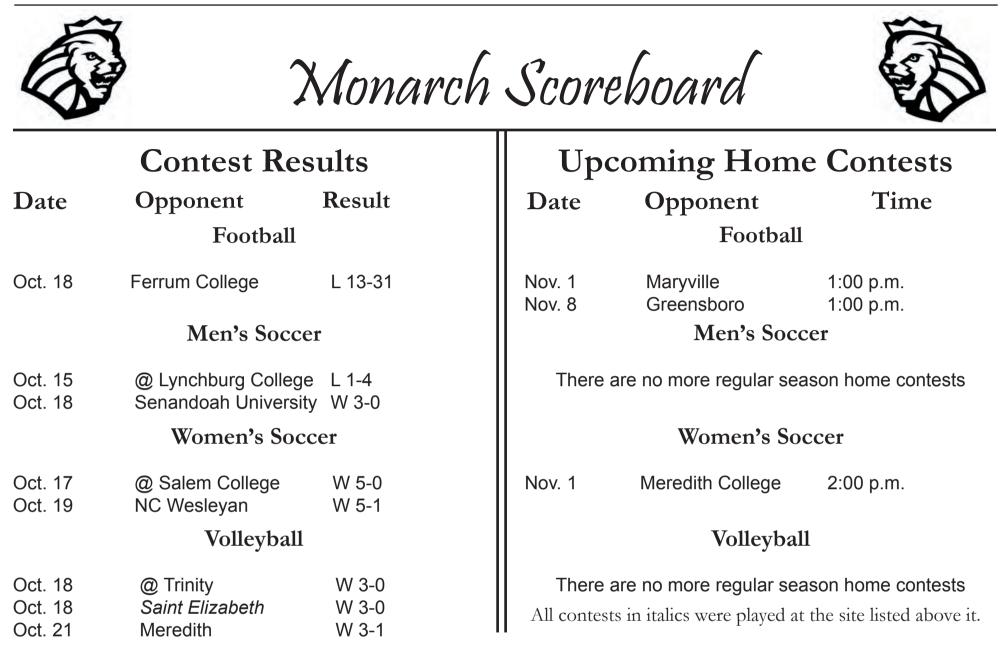

The 61-year-old Krzyzewski, who officially began in his 29th Duke season and 34th collegiate season Friday

Duke University athletic logo, courtesy of MCT Campus.

11

Due to the date of printing, smallTALK is unable to cover the contests that take place over the weekend prior to distribution.

Vote '08: continued from page 4

-HEALTHCARE-

All of the information below comes from third party, independent reviews that receive no funding from either party. Both parties propose plans that will have the greatest impact on families with a household income in the lower 50 percent of taxpayers' gross income, which according to the U.S. Census in 2008, is any family with a household income below $50,233.

The Obama healthcare plan is almost a mirror image of HillaryCare and seeks to form a government-controlled, Marx-style healthcare body funded solely by taxpayers. According to Health Systems Innovations the plan will cost taxpayers $3,000 per family, per year. HSI says that employers will be forced to provide 'meaningful' coverage or pay an additional part of a $179 billion per year employers' tax. A similar study by the Lewin Group concluded that almost 52 million would lose their private employer coverage, and fall into the government program - costing taxpayers even more. The study also concluded that the national system would undermine the private sector by imposing artificially low premiums since the U.S. government is guaranteeing the service. Additionally, the CATO Institute found that any cost overages would overflow onto the books of the U.S. Treasury and ultimately the taxpayers.

The McCain plan, in contrast, gives tax credits and incentives to taxpayers to decide their own healthcare needs - while providing a government-backed program only to the most needed areas of the lower 25 percent of tax brackets. According to HIS, this will cover 2 million more individuals than the Obama plan, covering a half of uninsured Americans. Additionally the HSI study found that Americans in the lower 50 percent tax bracket will see "a reduction in their health insurance costs resulting from the tax credit proposal." Lastly, the McCain plan bolsters private industry instead of undermining it.

It should also be noted that Obama's plan is similar to Canada's government plan. Dr. Jay H. Lehr, science director for The Heartland Institute, a nonprofit research and education organization, states, "The Canadian system's greatest failing is the unconscionable delay citizens must accept to obtain serious medical procedures."

No matter whom you vote for this election, I encourage you to get out and vote. Despite the controversy an unwavering belief in democracy has never directed this country poorly. Mark Nov. 4 on your calendar and vote for whoever your favorite candidate may be.

Graphic by Danielle Levine, original pictures courtesy of MCT Campus