THE WORLD OF COMPUTER SCIENCE AT METHODIST COLLEGE

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES

ARTS MANAGEMENT, COMPUTER SCIENCE MAJORS ADDED TO THE METHODIST COLLEGE CURRICULUM

Following a presidential mandate to energize the academic offerings for Methodist College students, the faculty has approved and instituted majors in Arts Management and Computer Science.

Arts Management will prepare a student to combine artistic talent with business training, leading to career opportunities in numerous art-related fields. Rationale leading to the institution of the Arts Management major indicated that a substantial if not explosive growth in the number of theatre companies, arts museums and galleries, musical organizations and other cultural institutions has occurred. In spite of the size and growth of culture in the United States, arts organizations themselves are not thriving. Costs of productions are rising faster than income: deficits are becoming ever larger, work stoppages are increasing and financial crises are becoming commonplace.

Most arts administrators currently are not trained as managers. Often the only business-trained person in an arts organization is the accountant. Consequently, highly skilled, professional administrators are vital to the arts now and that need will only increase in the future.

"This program is the only undergraduate program of its kind in North Carolina that I know of," says Dr. Jack Peyrouse, theatre arts director at Methodist. "The beauty of this major is that it can be adapted to a wide variety of professional opportunities."

The Arts Management major is directed toward a knowledge of and an appreciation for the relationships between the visual and performing arts and those organizations which support and administer them. Students will take selected courses in Fine Arts, Economics and Business. The entire program is brought into focus with an internship under a visual or performing arts organization.

The Computer Science major utilizes current courses within the mathematics major and adds to them specific courses in computer languages, programming, etc. Dr. Dwight House will return to the Methodist College campus to head up the new major. Dr. House, a former faculty member at Methodist, has coordinated the computer courses at Fayetteville Technical Institute for the past two years. Additional faculty within the major are Martha Moye, Captain Leonard Critcher and Dr. Elton Hendricks.

Dr. Hendricks is currently authoring a book on computers and asserts the theory that "every liberally-educated person in this century needs to be fully aware of computer operations and capabilities."

With the widespread use of computers in fields like medicine, law, art, writing, as well as the obvious fields of electronics and business, the computer science major finds professional opportunities unlimited.

Arts Management and Computer Science join Accounting as new majors implemented within the current academic year at Methodist College.

The Long Haul — A College Degree Through Night Classes

By Doug Fellows '83

Working towards a college degree in night school is one of the most demanding things a working adult can attempt. It is not exciting; it is not fun; it is not easy. It is very challenging, very tiring, and often very frustrating. Yet, when it's all over and that goal of earning a college degree has been attained, the feeling of satisfaction is immeasurable.

I have often heard instructors say that there's a light year's difference between teaching night classes and day classes in college. The attitudes and expectations of night students are vastly different. These students -- in their 30's, 40's, 50's even 60's -- are in that classroom for a definite reason. They know what they're after and what they must do to achieve it. They have years of life's experiences under their belts and are able to gauge the value of their accomplishments in college. In many cases these night students are able to apply what they learn at night directly to their jobs during the day. The night student can place real worth on many of the courses studied. This student knows that the many hours of work put into the night school program will earn him or her a raise, a promotion, or perhaps the ability to go after a better job. In short, the night student isn't pursuing some vague dream of a hoped-for career as are many young men and women who enter college directly from high school. The night student has a specific reason for being in college and he or she most likely has a definite idea of how that education will be of benefit.

Attending night school requires several qualities that most of us acquire only with the passage of time. First, it demands determination -- staying power and stamina and the will to keep plugging along despite hardships experienced along the way. It requires sacrifice. You cannot live a normal life and be very successful in night school. It requires ability to set goals and to strive to achieve them. It demands commitment -- the quality of sticking to the course you've set out on and resolving to meet all challenges no matter what obstacles occur because you believe in what you are doing. It requires total support by other family members. The hardship and sacrifices the student endures are felt equally by the wife and kids who don't see much of you for all those years. It requires and builds self-confidence. If you don't have faith in your own ability to succeed, you never will in night school. Determination, sacrifice, goal-setting, commitment, support, self-confidence -- pretty heavy concepts which, when combined, are the formula for success in any venture.

Celebration of that final step in college was the word for December 1983 graduates -- decorations everywhere proclaimed the event, even on cars. (Photo by Ayers)

Many people today are attending night school to pursue advanced degrees or to become qualified for new careers. Are you cut out for it? Here's a checklist of criteria you should consider before heading to the registrar's office:

1. Are you the type of person who's capable of working hard on several things at once and giving proper attention to each individually? You must be able to give 100% attention to your job, 100% attention to your family, 100% attention to your college work. Can you handle all three at once without getting fired, divorced, or "F's"?
2. Are you able to set priorities? Is seeing the Redskin-Cowboys game on Sunday afternoon more important than studying for a test coming up Monday night?
3. Are you able to learn from any situation? Face it. Some classes will seem meaningless.

Some instructors are downright boring. A combination of the two can be the kiss of death to your college ambitions if you don't have the determination to find some value in each course.

4. Are you willing to make all the sacrifices at home that college will require? How will you feel when a big exam that can't be missed comes up the same night your son or daughter is in the school play?
5. Is this college project what your family wants or what you want? Are you just trying to get out of the house at night? There are much more fun ways to do that than by going to night classes.
6. Can you force yourself to do things that you don't enjoy doing, like going to class every night?
7. Can you spare the money? College isn't getting any cheaper, and it might mean giving up your beach vacation one year.
8. Do you enjoy reading the daily newspaper, the financial press, a couple of good magazines each month, and the latest best-selling novels? If so, you may not want to go back to school at night because you won't have much time for discretionary reading.
9. Are you fast on your feet? Most days you will have to rush home from work, eat fast, and race to get to class on time. Some instructors don't appreciate late arrivals.
10. Can someone else at home fix the toilet, repair the bicycles, cut the grass, do some cooking or whatever those things are that you normally do? You simply don't have time -- not if you give your studies the attention they deserve.
11. Can you set and work towards long-term goals? If not, night school will seem like an endless tunnel of agony, and you probably will never try to reach the other end.

Night school is not exciting; it is not fun; it is not easy, but when you've made it to the end and look back over those years you realize how valuable it has been. The lessons learned by the night student are much more than simple knowledge about math or the arts or science. They are lessons of determination, commitment, achievement, family unity, and inner personal strength. They are lessons of life. They are priceless.

IT'S A TOUGH JOB, BUT SOMEBODY HAS TO DO IT

Vickie Weaver is a sergeant in the United States Army military police. It is the 1981 graduate's job to handle a squad of ten men on the military police beat—making sure that all is quiet on the front. A tough job, admittedly . . . but the fact that the "front" is the beaches of Puerto Rico and that "home" is a beachfront condominium makes the job a little easier to take.

Weaver, who majored in art at Methodist College and received an outstanding senior athlete award for her contributions to the women's volleyball and the women's basketball program, joined the Army in 1981 primarily to finance graduate school. Her timing was right, though, and Vickie found herself at Sierra Army Depot in Herlog, California, just in time to prepare for tryouts for the All-Army Volleyball team in Hawaii. An injury prevented her participating on the team, but it didn't prevent her from earning "Soldier of the Year for 1982" on the Sierra Army base.

"The best part of life in the Army is that it builds confidence and leadership," says Vickie. "The worst part is the complainers who refuse to make the best of the opportunities available to them."

No one can say that Vickie isn't making the best of those opportunities. She plans to enter Officers' Candidate School in April of this year and try her hand at another field—military intelligence—which will probably take her to Fort Benning, GA.

Is she on the way to being the highest-ranking female officer in the Pentagon?

Vickie says no.

"I'll make the Army my profession for seven more years," says the 6-foot sandy blonde. "Then I'm coming back home to Methodist to coach volleyball and softball," she adds with smile.

Vickie can be reached at Apartment 1A Villa Caparra Exec., Guaynabo, Puerto Rico 00657.

CHARTRES CATHEDRAL LECTURER SPEAKS AT METHODIST COLLEGE

Malcolm Miller, renowned lecturer/guide at Chartres Cathedral, delivered a slide lecture at Methodist College on Monday evening, February 13.

Miller was the first lecturer in the series "Focus on Stained Glass From Its Gothic Heritage Through the Modern Age" which featured exhibits, displays and films on the art of stained glass.

EDDIE OWENS 78 COMPLETES 1400-MILE HIKE TO TEXAS

Eddie Owens made it. The journey he began on foot early on the morning of September 1, 1983 from his home in Roxboro, NC, ended 89 days later in Texarkana, TX.

Why does a college graduate in religion and English with an additional degree in electronics strap 50 pounds of worldly goods to his back and set out to walk to Texas?

"I like to walk, to look at the scenery, and to talk to people," says Owens. "Thoreau says there's an art to walking. I don't know if there has to be a reason. It's not where you are going or why, but that you are going. I just felt I couldn't do anything else until I got this out of my system."

Owens left Roxboro equipped with a backpack, an American flag, mandolin, tape recorder, camera, bedroll, journal, maps and a compass with other supplies. His trail led south on the Blue Ridge Parkway to Asheville, and then across the mountains into northern Tennessee, southern Kentucky and southern Missouri. He entered northern Arkansas and continued south along the Oklahoma border until reaching New Boston, Texas.

Among the many things Eddie learned on the trip was the appreciation of two of life's little pleasures—home cooking and a bed in a family's home. Now that he has completed the journey, Eddie will begin a "more settled life" and a new job in North Carolina.

'THE DEATH AND LIFE OF SNEAKY FITCH' SET FOR APRIL PERFORMANCES

Methodist College will combine the best of both worlds as it presents the musical spoof THE DEATH AND LIFE OF SNEAKY FITCH in a Barbeque Theatre format on April 12, 13 and 14 in the Alumni Dining Rooms on the Methodist campus.

Alpha Psi Omega will offer the production as its tribute to spring. Ron Bonanni will direct the comedy on the death of the American dream as represented in cowboy-style. Methodist College graduate Connie Neal will serve as artistic director.

The productions are open to the public at a charge of $5 per person for the dinner theatre performances at 7 o'clock. Reservations should be made through Jack Peyrouse at Methodist College, 488-7110.

THE SMALL AMERICAN COLLEGE

A Vital National Asset
by Gary H. Quehl

American higher education is a prodigious enterprise. And it is effective. Approximately 3,200 colleges and universities educate more than 12,000,000 students each year. Collectively, they expend $61 billion annually, making higher education equivalent in output to agriculture or the communications industry. Colleges and universities represent one of this nation's most notable and most important-national achievements. They have served the nation well in educating its citizens, in expanding the frontiers of knowledge, and in providing service to communities.

Unfortunately, today one important segment of American higher education is particularly endangered: the nation's small independent colleges. Danger to small colleges comes not alone from insufficient funds, nor from too few traditional college-age students, nor from public policy problems common to most colleges and universities. These are surmountable obstacles, and some progress is being made to resolve them.

No, the real danger comes from misunderstanding the purpose, the place, and the value of small independent colleges in American society. Danger comes from the mistaken view that all colleges are the same, and that all people who attend them are the same. Danger comes from the erroneous assumption that public colleges serve the public good, but that private ones do not. Danger comes from the short-sighted view that the primary purpose of undergraduate educational is technical training for entry-level jobs. Danger comes from the modern belief that colleges should be efficient rather than effective, and that large is good and small is bad. And danger comes from the cavalier idea that it really doesn't matter if some of our small colleges live or die.

Though small individually and sometimes little known outside their own region-independent colleges represent collectively a national resource of enormous power and importance. These colleges might be called an obscured national asset. This is their portrait:

• There are 1,549 independent colleges and universities in the country. Seven hundred and twenty are specialized schools or two-year colleges, leaving 829 colleges and universities that award the baccalaureate degree or higher. Of this number, 618, or seventy-five percent, are small private colleges that enroll 2,500 or fewer total students. In short, small colleges are the core of the private sector of higher education.

- More than three-fourths of these 618 small colleges are affiliated in some way with an established church or other religious denomination.
- Four-year private colleges enroll more than sixty percent of the nation's independent college and university students.
- Sixty-one percent of students attending small colleges are residents of the state in which the college is located.
- About fourteen percent of the students attending small colleges are from minority backgrounds, and more than three percent are students from countries other than the United States.

- Annual tuition and fees at twenty-three percent of small colleges are less than $2,000 (eighty-one percent charge less than $4,000), making them accessible to many students who otherwise could not afford college.
- Close to sixty percent of student attending small colleges receive some form of financial aid.
- Sixty-two percent of students attending small colleges live on campus. Studies have repeatedly demonstrated that the residential life of a small college makes a vital contribution to the education and personal maturation of undergraduate students.

- Small colleges offer special education opportunities for students. Ninety-one percent of these colleges offer independent study, eighty-three percent offer internships, fifty-seven percent offer student designed majors, fifty percent offer accelerated academic programs, and forty-three percent have honors programs.
- Small independent colleges send thirty-six percent of their undergraduates on to graduate or professional school.
- If these privately-funded small colleges did not exist, it would cost the taxpayer roughly $2 billion to replace plant facilities at today's rates. It would also require additional operating funds in excess of $4 billion annually.

Impressive as these aggregated statistics are, they mask the true strengths of small colleges: their individual nature, their diversity.

TWO NEW PROGRAM ENERGIZE FINANCIAL AID TO STUDENTS

In an effort to offset any cutbacks in federal aid to college students and possible tuition hikes, Methodist College has developed two new programs to assist students on the basis of academic potential and willingness to work.

Director of Financial Aid Donna Coons states that Incentive Scholarships will be offered to entering freshmen and freshmen transfer students who satisfy requirements based on class rank and SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) scores. The chart on which Incentive Scholarships are based is shown below. Based on this chart, a student can qualify for up to $3000 annually as a resident student or $2000 annually as a commuter student.

Renewal of the Incentive Scholarship will be determined at the end of the Spring Semester and is contingent on the earning of at least a 3.0 grade point average on hours attempted.

The second new program in financial aid for Methodist College students is the College Work Program (CWP) which will offer to any residential student at Methodist the opportunity to work on campus for minimum wage approximately five hours per week. This work program will not be need-based and is open to any residential student, although no student can receive over the total college costs in financial aid awards.

Coons says "These two programs represent our commitment to assure that any student wishing to attend Methodist College will not be deprived of doing so by lack of money."

Further information on these new programs or the existing programs of financial aid is available from the Financial Aid Office at Methodist.

FAR TO GO...

To those who have already contributed this year, we are eternally grateful. We invite those who haven't to invest in the

READ THIS Greatest Gift Scholarship Program Revised: Now A Four-Year Scholarship

Do you want to make a significant difference in the life of another person? You can by awarding your Greatest Gift Scholarship to someone you recruit to come to Methodist College. And the best part is, it doesn't cost you anything. The rules are simple: If you recruit a student to attend Methodist College, you can award him/her a scholarship for 1/4 of the current year's tuition. You can award a scholarship to a new student each year and possibly be sponsoring four students at a time.

Take a moment to read the following information and guidelines for the Greatest Gift Scholarship Program. If you have any questions, write or call:

Office of Alumni Affairs
Methodist College
Fayetteville, NC 28301

(1) Each graduate of Methodist College is eligible to award one scholarship of 1/4 of one year's tuition as often as he/she recruits a student to receive the award. (limit of one person per year).

(2) The scholarship must initially be awarded to a person who: a. Is a new full-time student.

b. Is enrolled in the day program.
c. Meets all the requirements for admission to Methodist College.

(3) The scholarship will be applicable for an academic year. (not available for summer school)

(4) It will be a renewable scholarship, provided the student has a 1.75 grade-point average at the end of the freshmen year and a 2.00 each year thereafter, to be determined at the end of each academic year. Once the scholarship is lost, it cannot be regained.

(5) In succeeding year, the amount of the scholarship will remain 1/4 of that current year's tuition.

(6) A student may be the recipient of only one Greatest Gift Scholarship.

(7) In order to nominate a student for the Greatest Gift Scholarship, the graduate must request an application form from the Office of Alumni Affairs. When the application is returned, the Directors of Alumni Affairs and Financial Aid will approve it, provided all requirements are met.

(8) When the student recipient receives acceptance from the College, the College will then credit his/her account with the scholarship.

(9) An Alumnus can award one Greatest Gift Scholarship per year.

(10) The Greatest Gift Scholarship program is a recruiting "tool" to be used by alumni only. The application must reflect that the alumnus has actively recruited the student to come to Methodist College. The following guidelines must be observed:

a. Students cannot solicit receipt of the Greatest Gift Scholarship for themselves.

b. Faculty and staff members of Methodist College cannot solicit alumni to award their scholarships to prospective students.

c. Methodist College athletes who are recruited by members of the Methodist College athletic staff to participate in the College athletic programs are ineligible to receive a Greatest Gift Scholarship, in order to comply with NCAA Division III rules.

(11) This revised statement of policy concerning the Greatest Gift Scholarship program will be effective beginning with the 1984-85 academic year.

METHODIST COLLEGE DAY PROCLAIMED BY MAYOR

Mayor Bill Hurley has proclaimed Thursday, February 23 as Methodist College Day throughout the Fayetteville/Cumberland County community.

Kicking off the annual fund-raising efforts of the Methodist College Foundation was a breakfast for the 175 members of the MC Foundation's Developmental Team.

Developmental team members are professional people and community leaders who have cleared their calendars for a day to solicit financial contributions for Methodist College.

Campaign Chairman I. B. Julian asserts that the campaign theme "Partners For Progress" accurately describes the relationship between the community and the campus.

"Now it's time to pull our weight in this relationship -- the Fayetteville community pledged to support Methodist College with $120,000 annually when the college was established here."

Dr. Dennis Jackson serves as president of the Methodist College Foundation for 1984 and presided at the Kick-off Breakfast on Thursday morning, 8 o'clock, in the Alumni Dining Room.

SEARS-ROEBUCK FOUNDATION INCLUDES METHODIST COLLEGE IN GRANTS

Unrestricted grants totaling more than $44,500 will be distributed to 38 privately supported colleges and universities in North Carolina by the Sears-Roebuck Foundation.

In the Fayetteville area, Methodist College will receive grants totaling $500.00.

The North Carolina colleges and universities are among 934 private accredited two and four year institutions across the country which are sharing in $1,575,000 in Sears Foundation funds for the 1983-84 academic year. Funds may be used as the colleges and universities deem necessary.

In addition to its unrestricted grant program, The Sears-Roebuck Foundation each year conducts a variety of other programs in elementary, secondary and higher education. Altogether, the Foundation had expenditures of approximately $2,500,000 in 1983 for its education activities.

FROM HOWARD...

Dear Friends:

What a wonderful year we are experiencing in the life of Methodist College and in particular the Alumni Association. Do you realize the tremendous amount of progress the MCAA has achieved during the past few months? If you haven't been part of these good things -- now is your opportunity. DON'T MISS IT!

And speaking of ways to be a part of the Association - remember the PHONATHON is just a few short weeks away. This is your chance to be involved - your opportunity to remember Methodist College - your chance to say I want to contribute to the Loyalty Fund. It's so easy to let our Association take a back burner. All of us at some time have done this; however, now we can and should show our best to all the College community. Don't forget the PHONATHON!

A few months ago I published my address and telephone number in this paper in hopes that if there were some things you wanted to discuss you might call or write me. I think maybe you lost the address, so here it is again:

1004 Thoreau Drive
Raleigh, North Carolina

(919)-876-3120 office

Call me - Write me - Let me know what is going on in your life - what you feel about Methodist College and the Alumni Association. When you call and I'm not in, leave a message and I'll call you back.

And finally, all of us should be very proud of the job that is being done by your officers and Board of Directors. These people have worked very hard to make this a very positive and moving year for the Association. They have sure made my job easy and a real pleasure. They all deserve our special thanks for a job well done!

Don't forget the PHONATHON and don't forget to get involved in our Alumni Association.

Howard

FROM PAT...

Dear Friends,

These are exciting times for MC alumni. Hardly a day goes by that I don't hear from someone who asks, "What can I do to help? How can I get involved?" People are "coming out of the woodwork" with all sorts of creative ideas for Methodist College. There are several that I would like to share with you.

A special group of alumni attended a training session in January to become reacquainted and updated on MC. They will host alumni receptions for prospective students and parents in their areas in March and April.

We're excited about these receptions and confident they'll make a difference for Methodist College.

The first MC phonathon since 1978-79 will be held this March. Phonathons are great fun and fellowship and can make a significant contribution to financial campaigns. call or write (919/488-7110) if you can help with the telephones - if you can't, join us by making a pledge when you're called.

A day we're excited about is Saturday, May 26 - Alumni Work Day. Any and all who want to help "spruce up" the campus are invited to come ready to rake, hoe, plant, paint, repair, etc. Look for details coming soon.

As you can see, Methodist alumni are on the move. We thank you for your interest, your time, your talents and your gifts. May your tribe increase.

FROM GWEN...

The calendar says that spring is only a few weeks away, but the thermometer still hovers at 20 degrees outside the window. No complaints...we've only had one-half inch of snow this winter and in typical Fayetteville fashion, it was gone by early afternoon.

Enter the computer age -- a new computer science major on campus and a new computer/printer for me. I am sitting here at the computer keyboard composing to the monitor -- a reluctant convert to the advantages of electronic media. Reluctant is perhaps a mild word for the frustration I felt as I tried from Christmas Day until early February to get the computer to send an appropriate command to the letter-quality printer. I understood completely the motivation behind the man who shot Tillie the Teller with a double-barrelled shotgun. Somehow I found little comfort in the fact that the computer could play a mean game of Centipede but refused to print so much as a mild "Now is the time for all good men..." After countless slurs against the mentality of the printer I have discovered that the mentality of the printee was the only thing in question. It really is so simple once you know how. To my credit, I can even use "interface" in casual conversation without hesitation! Now if I could only figure out how to underline and boldface, life would be infinitely less complicated.

A quick look through this issue of Methodist College Today will give you a hint of the high energy level on campus currently.

Operative word is NEW -- new majors, new programs in financial aid, new MCAA officers, new sports for the fall of 1984, new spirit after the defeat of Campbell University in basketball, and new attention to fund-raising. With all due respect to progress, I have sided with philosophers who assert that "less is more" and "Bigger is not always better." Still the excitement of the campus is contagious and the old traditions are enhanced by the new hopes. The best of both worlds is what we're after -- the best of the heritage graduates like you and me have left behind and the best of the prospective students who face a far more technically-oriented society.

The Inauguration Celebration for Dr. Hendricks will address this merger of past and present with the Inaugural Theme: "Truth and Virtue in the Twenty-First Century." The motto embossed on the Methodist College seal is clear embodiment of the qualities we seek to have -- the particular challenges of truth and virtue in contemporary society will be addressed by a prestigious panel of learned men and women.

As always, people make the difference between contentment and happiness. You bring happiness to the campus with your visits, your concern, your support and your opinions. Support is not defined here as monetary (although I am still looking for that generous donor for whom we could name the new gym!) but rather as visionary. When you come back, you reaffirm that a part of the Methodist College campus will forever be home to you. When you write or call, I know that we have been on your mind. When you take pride in the fact that you are a Methodist College graduate, I stand a little taller with you. You do know that you matter, don't you? Pat and I keep the lines busy between our offices with calls like "Guess who I just talked to!" or "You will never believe who just wrote to us!" You will never be taken for granted here.

Spring will arrive soon with all the promise a sunny day brings...promise you will enjoy each and every one of them!

FAIRMONT NATIVE LEADS ON COURT

Fairmont is a nice town which produces some good basketball players occasionally. Perhaps as an aside to its other attributes Fairmont High School sent its 1983 squad to the state final where the team lost the championship.

With a record of 26-1, Fairmont was an outstanding team -- only one was better.

Lee Townsend was the leader of that team, averaging 14 points per game. The same player is averaging 12.6 points a game at Methodist College and leads the conference in rebounding with 8.4 rebounds per game.

In just three months of collegiate basketball, 6 feet 2 inch Townsend has been named Rookie of the Week in the DIAC twice.

Talking of his play so far in college, Townsend says, "It's been good; when I first came here I didn't think I was going to be this good."

In high school Townsend reached a career high of 32 points in the Eastern Regionals last year. Against Virginia Wesleyan Townsend led the Monarchs with 22 points as the Monarchs won by ten.

Though Methodist coach Joe Miller didn't start Lee Townsend at the beginning of the season; the freshman has been getting more and more playing time and is now in the starting line up.

Townsend feels that the team is a good one -- quicker, moving better and more able to execute.

Despite all his awards and honors, the real reason Lee Townsend plays basketball is because he enjoys doing it.

"I've grown up playing ball; I enjoy it," says Townsend.

WOMEN'S SOCCER & GOLF ADDED TO CAMPUS

Two new varsity sports are scheduled for inclusion in the Methodist athletic program according to Director of Athletics, Gene Clayton.

Women's soccer is scheduled to begin intercollegiate competition in the fall of 1984, while Women's golf will begin in the spring of 1985.

The slate of teams which the new soccer squad will go up against include North Carolina State, Duke, Randolph Macon, Lynchburg and NC Wesleyan.

There are no distinctions between NCAA Division I, II, and III in Women's Soccer. The sport is so new that all schools are beginning their programs.

North Carolina Wesleyan began their program in women's soccer last year and were successful on the field as well as in recruiting. The new team brought in 12 new female dorm students to the Dixie Conference school.

"It is the fastest growing collegiate sport in the nation," according to Clayton.

There are two reasons for the new teams according to Clayton. The NCAA (National Collegiate Athletic Association) requires that a member institution have at least four varsity sports for women. With the lack of interest shown in the women's tennis team in 1982 (resulting in the dropping of the sport) Methodist fell below this minimum standard.

Women's soccer and golf will meet the NCAA rule (women's tennis should return next season also) and also attract new female dorm students.

"We think we can recruit 10 to 15 more women per year," says Clayton. "It will be a very cost-effective program."
